NIGHT CLASSES AT KING EDWARD START WITH 41

Man Handicapped by Lack of Schooling Resume Practical Studies

The night classes for boys and men will be opened at 7:30 o'clock this evening in the King Edward School, south end. Reading, writing, spelling, and arithmetic will be taught. Registration of pupils has been carried on during the last two weeks, and it was said today that all looks favorable for another successful season.

Rex R. Cormier, principal of King Edward School, has had charge of this work for many years, and he says that the applicants this year compare very favorably in general intelligence with those of former classes.

SOME OF THE REASONS

Some of the pupils wish to improve their general education so as to be qualified later to take a course at the Vocational School; others are seeking promotion in their present employment, but find that they are handicapped owing to a lack of knowledge of general subjects; and others left day school at an early age rather than repeat the work of a grade from which they had failed to attain promotion. Then, realizing their mistake after having been engaged in various forms of employment for a few years, they decided to take the advice of their parents, employers, and return to school to resume their studies.

Several of these young men were pleased to find that it would not be necessary for them to repeat from the first the subjects of the grade in which they had failed, but that, after a certain time spent in review, they could proceed with new work. Mr. Cormier said that he had enrolled several men who, when younger, on account of unfavorable circumstances, had attended school but little. They seemed anxious to avail themselves of this opportunity to learn to read and write.

Up to the present 41 pupils have been registered to attend in the King Edward night school classes, and others have expressed an intention of enrolling within a few days.

HUNTERS RETURN TO U. S. PLEASED

Four from Pennsylvania in City on Saturday—Each Gets Moose

A. C. Amesbury, W. Charles Haney, Thomas S. Evans and Heiter DeWitt of Danville, Pa., arrived in the city from the moose woods of York county on Saturday's train and proceeded homeward by the American boat route in the evening. These Pennsylvania Indians, who have been in New Brunswick before, staking big game, are very enthusiastic about this country as a hunting ground. And they have good reason to be, it would seem, for while under the guidance of Guide Bonner about the Nason brothers, as well as Oscar Phillips, each one of the four men got his moose at the rate of a moose a day. Each animal was a bull with a splendid spread of horns and all the other desirable game markings. They went all to the had in his time—an' the wasn't much difference between the Frenchmen an' the Indians. At last the was only five or six families left on the Saint John. Then was the ghosts o' drunken Indians we just seen in the moonlight of the river."

As Hiram Sees It

THE SETTLEMENT: While me an' the town feller was talkin' about Soulanges an' Fort Jim-sag we seen some canoes with a lot of Indians aboard crossin' in the patch o' moonlight on Long Reach. They seemed to be yellin' an' wavin' their arms an' 'relin' a wild time. "Them," says the town feller, "is the ghosts of a party of Indians goin' home. That was about how hundred an' forty year ago. After Gove's Soulanges died, a feller named la Valliere got the job fer six or seven years an' robbed an' cheated the Indians right an' left. A feller named Perrot was appointed to take his place in 1685—an' he was still worse. He sold the Indians by the pint an' half pint to the Injuns—right in the house—an' him the gove'nor. Things went all to the had in his time—an' the wasn't much difference between the Frenchmen an' the Indians. At last the was only five or six families left on the Saint John. Then was the ghosts o' drunken Indians we just seen in the moonlight of the river."

"Well," says I, "bootleggin' got an' arly start on Long Reach—an' they say it aint all done yet."

COUNCILLORS DO NOT MEAN TO RESIGN POSTS

Representatives in Lancaster Asked About Decision of Ratepayers' Meeting

"No, I am not going to resign! Why should I pay any attention to a movement started by persons who have no vote in parish affairs just now, and why should I pay any attention to a letter signed by a man whose name is not on the voters' list, or should not be?" This was the reply of Councillor William McCavour this morning to a query as to whether he would resign in compliance with a resolution passed at a public meeting of the ratepayers of Lancaster, held Saturday evening in the Beaufield school.

The councillor said that it was his intention to have a check most of the names signed to the petition presented to the Municipal Council asking for an audit, so as to find out how many of them had their taxes paid and were eligible to vote at an election for councillors. He said that under the amendment secured at the last session of the legislature, any person who owed one cent of taxes on September 1 in any year could not have his name on the voters' list for that year and could not have it added until September 1 in the following year.

LEAVES IT TO BALLOT

"Under this legislation," said the councillor, "the name of Harold P. Crouse, which was signed to the letter addressed to me, has no right on the voters' list, and why should I recognize any man who is not a voter? The voters of the parish elected me to serve them to the best of my ability, and so long as I am a member of the council that will be my aim and what they are not satisfied they can get rid of me the same way they elected me—by their votes."

The legislation adopted last year provides that in the Parishes of Lancaster and Simonds the list of voters shall be made up each year September 1 by the assessors and shall contain the names of all persons whose taxes are paid in full up to that date, but does not say how the assessors shall ascertain who have paid their taxes and who have not.

COUNCILLOR GOLDING

Councillor William Golding, whose resignation was also asked for in the resolution adopted by the meeting, said this morning that he had nothing to say at present further than it was not his intention to resign at present.

RECEPTION BEING PLANNED BY CHURCH

Central Baptist Congregation to Welcome New Pastor and Wife, Oct. 19

Rev. Bruce D. Knott, new pastor of Central Baptist church, conceded his first week with his flock yesterday, when large congregations attended services at Sunday school session. During the week the former Yarmouth clergyman moved into his home, Leinster street. Now the congregation is arranging for a formal reception of Rev. Mr. Knott and his wife.

At the close of the evening service Sunday an impromptu congregational meeting was held, at which a composite committee from among 100 members was appointed to make arrangements for an auditorium meeting of welcome and reception tea to be held Tuesday evening, Oct. 19.

Since Rev. Mr. Knott's arrival at Central Baptist church have been resumed vigorously. The Sunday school session yesterday, presided over by A. E. Jennings, was largely attended. During the day re-organization for the winter of the B. Y. P. U. and the Chinese department was begun. A latter class, a missionary effort with the congregation for the last 35 years, had been discontinued for several months, but is to be revived.

PREMIER DECLARES REPORT IS UNTRUE

Nothing to Rumored Change in Position of Chief Inspector Under Prohibition

That there was not anything to a report about town over the week-end to the effect that W. S. McFarlane, chief inspector under the Prohibition Act, was slated for dismissal was the reply by Premier John B. M. Baxter this morning when questioned on the matter. The rumor coupled with the alleged dismissal of the report that A. J. Doucet, ex-M. P. for Kent county, would be appointed in Mr. McFarlane's place.

Respecting the telegram he sent to Rev. A. M. Angus, former liquor inspector in the Sackville district who made certain allegations with respect to enforcement of prohibition there, the Premier said he had not had any reply yet to his telegram inviting Rev. Mr. Angus to return and lay his charges before a properly-constituted board of investigation.

Loch Lomond Fair Comes Wednesday

Those promoting the event are looking for the success of other years repeated at the 1926 gathering. This fair has been held annually for a long term of years. It draws a large attendance from the surrounding country and the exhibits cover a wide range of live stock and farm produce, as well as needlework and cooking of the farmers' wives and daughters. The fair usually attracts a good number of people from the city.
