UNCOVERING THE PAST OF LONG AGO

Discoveries in South America
by Expedition From Johns Hopkins University.

Baltimore, Md., Nov. 8.—Results of the George Huntington Williams Memorial Expedition to South America, which was sent to Chile, Bolivia and Peru in April, 1919, by the Johns Hopkins University for the purpose of investigating the history of the Andes Mountains and searching for prehistoric remains which would tend to throw light upon the early history of South America, have been made public by Dr. Edward W. Berry, of the Department of Geology.

Dr. Berry, professor of paleontology, and Dr. J. T. Singwald, Jr., professor of economic geology at Johns Hopkins, both of whom were members of the expedition, have been working all summer over the mass of material and copious notes collected in South America, and have at last brought the matter into such shape that an announcement of the results of the expedition might be made.

One of the most interesting discoveries that the expedition made was undoubtedly evidence that South America was connected with the Antarctic regions by land masses that sank below the sea ages ago. Dr. Berry said that the dis-

DEAD MEN TELL NO TALES

Discovery of animal and vegetable fossils on the mainland of South America and the same varieties of fossils in the land around the south pole, and also the character of the rocks in both South America and Antarctica, was proof that the two land masses were formerly connected.

Among other interesting discoveries was that the Andes Mountains, about which little had been known before, were from five to twenty million years younger than the rocks around Baltimore. Dr. Berry said that the rocks comprising the western range of the Andes were of mesozoic age, or about

The actual uplift into mountains occurred in very recent times, probably not long before the men of the old stone age appeared in Europe. He said that, geologically speaking, the Andes are the youngest large mountain system in the world.

Included in the numerous geological specimens and fossil remains which the expedition brought home are large numbers of fossil seashells found on the crests of the Andes, indicating that the straits forming the mountains were once submerged below the level of the sea. Remains of a fossil flora, such as imense ferns, and other plants of the

D'ANNUNZIO IN TROUBLE AGAIN

(Canadian Press Despatch.)
Rome, Nov. 7.—Just as the negotiations between Italy and Yugoslavia are about to begin, trouble has occurred between the insurgent troops under Gabriele D'Annunzio in command at Fiume, and the Serbs. On Thursday, D'Annunzio sent Captain Piffero, his first aide, from Trent with sailors and Alpine troops to occupy St. Mark's Rock, at the entrance of the Adriatic strait, to prevent the Serbians from the opposite shore, on Buceari promontory, from interfering with navigation.

On Friday, the Serbians, realizing that the Fiumians had occupied and were fortifying the place, opened fire on them, Carboniferous Age which help to make the coal beds of the region were found. A few specimens of large land animals, such as huge ground sloths, saber-tooth tigers and other animals of a remote age were found, but practically none of the antediluvian reptilian animals were discovered.

according to a despatch to the Idea Nazionale as well as on the small steamer which D'Annunzio had put at the disposal of his men.

Captain Piffero sent a few Alpine soldiers across the strait and the Serbian contingent fled. Three of them were captured and taken to Fiume, where they declared they had been ordered to fire upon St. Mark's to prevent the work of fortification.
