ary number of crimes during the last three days.

Yesterday thirteen serious crimes were reported in Paris alone, and the list is by no means complete.

A wine merchant was almost cut to pieces by two customers in the small hours of this morning because his wine was sour. A rag-picker went mad and half killed a woman, whose brother shot him dead. A hotel servant was suddenly attacked by the occupant of a room which did not please him, and was killed by a blow with a chair.

An "Apache," for no apparent reason, stabbed two women in Montmartre. A policeman, who captured him was bitten so badly in the face that he is in the hospital. Two ragpickers came to blows, and one drawing a revolver shot the other dead.

A furious crowd attempted to lynch the father and mother of two little children, whom they cared for insufficiently, and nearly killed the father. When the police took them prisoners the crowd fell on the police and wounded six of them in their efforts to get at the couple again.

Four suicides are reported. The first was a young soldier who poisoned himself because his leave ended this morning. The second, a man of 58, suffocated himself because he had lost his position as a clerk. The third was the suicide of a young woman who shot herself dead in the courtyard of a fire retter in the Place Violet because a

BOY OF FIFTLEN SLAYS HIS GIRL-LOVE

MANCHESTER, June 20.—Millicent George, a young servant employed by the village schoolmaster at Gayton, near Northampton, made five remarkable attempts to commit suicide on Sunday morning and succeeded in setting her master's house on fire.

She waited until her master and mistress had gone to church, and then she undressed and tried to drown herself by holding her head in a bowl of water. This proved to slow and she then tried to strangle herself by knotting a piece of cord around her neck.

This method also did not satisfy her, and she cut her throat with a small knife but the wound was a superficial one. Then she drank a quantity of belladonna, which was used by her mistress as an embrocation, and finally she carried a paraffin lamp upstairs, saturated her head and her bed with the oil and set the bed on fire and lay down on it.

The bed was made of flock, however, and instead of bursting into flame it only smouldered. The smoke poured out of the window and attracted the attention of the neighbors, who entered the bouse and rescued her just as the bed MILAN, June 20—Light has been shed upon the recent murder of the young girl, Carolina Piovano, aged 14, in the San Vito forest, near Turin, through the confession of a lad of 15, named Domenico Villa.

In the course of their investigations the police deemed it necessary to ransack the dwelling of the girl's family, where they lighted upon a quantity of love letters addressed to Carolina by the boy Villa, whose parents are guardians of a palatial summer residence in the vicinity. The 9-year-old brother of the murdered girl then admitted having acted as the bearer of missives between the two lovers unknown to his parents.

On visiting Villa's home the police had their suspicions further aroused by the fact that the boy had been hurriedly sent away by his parents to the care of relatives living in the mountains at Valsalice. There the detectives discovered the youth, who at first brazenly denied the slightest acquaintance with the victim.

He was closely protected by a gathering of fourteen relatives, and it was tion of the neighbors, who entered the house and rescued her just as the bed was beginning to blaze.

The fire burned out two rooms before it could be extinguished. The girl was taken to the Northampton Hospital where it is said that she still has a

Mr. Elder, who at first asserted that he would not make any agreement upon the case with the racing interests, declares he will prosecute Collins. In other respects this promised to be a momentous day for the racing interests. The injunction secured by the Coney Island Jockey Club restricting the police from interfering with the orderly collection of patrons about the racetrack grounds, was returnable before Justice Bischoff today, when the question whether or not it shall be made permanent might be argued.
