MYARY W WE N'S

Mr. Hutchinson, Mr. Carter, Ladies and entlemen-Permit me very briefly and very inadequately, but very, very sincerely, to thank you, both on my own behalf, and on the behalt of Mrs. Molnerney and my fam-ily, for this kind presentation both of the address and the book-case, which you have made to us this evening. Very briefly, because I apprehend, Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen, that you have not come here to sten to any extended remarks from me tonight; very inadequately, because anything I can say will be insufficient to convey to you the feelings of my heart at this time; very, very sincerely, however, because I can assure you that anything I shall say will but very poorly express the emotions which now almost overcome me. The great task for me this evening is to speak, saying what should like to say, because I am afraid that if I do not bridle and rein in my speech, I may be carried into a vein that might unman me. Your address reminds me of many thing Your address reminds me of many things which on an occasion like this, you have seen fit to bring to my remembrance. You have thought fit to remind me of the long years I have lived in Richtbucto, this twenty-four years, that I have lived in this town. (It is

I nave lived in kichnoloco, this twenty-four years, that I have lived in this town. (It is true that I was born and brought up in Kingsten, or Rexton, and let me tell you that Kingston is my first love-naturally so, naturally so-a man may not forget that. The place that he was born and brought up in in his younger days, must necessarily hold out ties of a kind to impress him infrougi: All the rest of his life.) Now twenty-four years is a considerable time in the life of a man of my age, and it mixt be a very unenviable nature indred which could bid fareweil without regret to the triendships which it had been passed. Twenty-four years ago I came to this town, then a very young man indeed, and entered shortly after upon the labors of my profes-sion. Will you permit me to say, my learned riend, Mr. Hutchinson, one of the oldest barristers in the province of New Brunswick todoy. Mr. Hutchinson, was one tlemen, will you permit me to say, my learned friend, Mr. Hutchinson, one of the oldest baritsters in the province of New Brunswick today, Mr. Hutchinson was one the earliest friends of my profession. Mr. Phinney is very worthily filling a position of honor in Fredericton. With Mr. Hutchinson and Mr. Phinney I put in some time in the study of the law. Later, when I came to the practice of my profession, my friend Mr. Richardson and I worked together in part-nership; afterwards, my friend Mr. Carter joined with me, and nov Mr. Robideau is with me as a partner. My friend Mr. Carter joined with me, and nov Mr. Robideau is with me as a partner. My friend Mr. James (the young Mr. James), who is about to more into your midst, is also an old asso-ciate; so, that, with every member of the profession here today. I have been intimate-ly connected. I feel that on my part to-wards them I have acted as they have ac-ted towards me, fairly, squarely, and you will allow me to say, honorably. I can scarcely raply to this address coming from you, this address which expresses rather the warmth of your hearts, than it commends any qualities which I may possess. I have endeavored, in my humble way, to fill the position to which you, ladies and gen-tlemen, have sceen fit to raise me. It is my proud boast that outside the gifts of the people, coming directly from the people, 1 have never held office. I do not say that of the men who hold office, one man cannot be just as good as another, but I have en-deavored for the gifts of the people to re-turn some value for the trusts that they have imposed in me.

All

turn some value for the trusts that they have imposed in me. Now, in leaving Richibucto, I hope that nobody will think that I am leaving it from any motive caused by my defeat, or that I hold any hard feelings over what may have happened, or that I flatter myself with the belief that I can do any better anywhere else. You have given me gifts and you have given me trusts; you have given me friend-ships never to be forgotten, and in going from here, in going from this place to the neighboring city of St. John, I go, more for the purpose of advancing the interests of my neighboring city of St. John, I go, more for the purpose of advancing the interests of my family than my own. There are wider op-pertunities, there are more encouragements to work for boys fast growing towards mar-hedd, and it is more on their account than my own that I throw from me the manile of many offices, that have covered me with their charity, I may say; and now, when the sun of life is rapidly descending towards the west, I must, with ripening years, go out again to begin in a strange place to make the struggle among men who do not know me nearly so well as you do. It is not the love of money which takes me away. Money is a good thing to have, but, as Burns says, it is a good thing to have, "Not for to hide it in a hedge,

"He either fears his fate too much, Or his deserts are small, Who dares not put it to the touch, To win or lose it all."

ACCIDENT AT SYDNEY

SYDNEY, C. B., Nov. 5 .- A distress ing accident occurred this afternoon at the Steel Company's pier. John Ryan, carpenter, of North Sydney, threw himself over the side of the pier in order to drop on the staging underneath. In the act he gripped a rail. Just then a train came lown the pier, and the wheels passing over the hand severed the wrist from the arm. Ryan was taken immediately to the company's hospital. He was very weak from the loss of hool

E. LeRoi Willis and other Sydney men have organized a company to handle an invention, which, it is claimed, may revolutionive telegraphy. George H. Hackett, of the Western Union cable office at Sydney, is the nventor, and the machine is an improved perforator, which is said to be far superior to the Wheatstone device, now regarded as the best instrument for the transmission of messages over the wire. The Hackett machine can be operated by one man, and it will. it is said, handle the work of three or four men. It is very easily operated, being on the same principle as the typewriter and is comparatively simple in construction. The new instruent has been patented in Canada, the United States, England and other European countries.
