

PREACHED BE
AT PARIS,
BY REV. GI

" But none

THAT fixedness
necessary to the will, I think, be
ment's reflection.
moral events whi
at once perceiving
in the commence
were firmness of purpose? If we
volutions which h
levelled thrones i
been commenced
ing determined up
with unshaken res
carried out their p
such minds difficult
they are like the
obstruction has be
moment, as if to s ing on with tenfold
ring, and rolls on
unconquerable pow
tence about the m
out his purposes v
other hand, fickle
every effort which
of an object, howe
worthy the object t
will prevent an ind
purpose in any dep
thou shalt not exc
any one has cor