I was fortunate enough to obtain a refund, but only after a bout of protests to and from the CHSC manager. I felt annoyed and disappointed, as I really counted on having a good time as in past events. I have always tried to support university and was dismayed that such an experience would happen to me. The chief of campus police had told me that the CHSC manager was responsible for the pub, yet, when approached denied this. He remained calm but became rude. All he could say was "After the sale of tickets, the pub is out of my hands," and suggested we return after obtaining more identification. By then I felt angry and humiliated especially after he reluctantly gave a refund to me when requested. If the CHSC manager is not to blame for the sale of tickets - which were sold in "his club" along with misadvertising and misinforming fellowalumni and others who frequent the club who is to blame?

Again, if I had been informed at the sale of the tickets, I am sure this would not have occured. (For I have always complied to regulations). I know that I am not the only person and alumni member to frequent and use university facilities and to see posters advertising future events. Please if there is to be any restrictions on future events, as to student body alone, as well as type of "id" it should be indicated (to prevent misleading people into buying a ticket and then not being permitted to attend.)

I still feel my rejection and refusal of admission to the pub was unjustifiable and remain,
