

CHAPTER VI

1754, 1755.

THE SIGNAL OF BATTLE.

	PAGE
Troubles of Dinwiddie.—Gathering of the Burgesses.—Virginia Society.—Refractory Legislators.—The Quaker Assembly.—It refuses to resist the French.—Apathy of New York.—Shirley and the General Court of Massachusetts.—Short-sighted Policy.—Attitude of Royal Governors.—Indian Allies waver.—Convention at Albany.—Scheme of Union.—It fails.—Dinwiddie and Glen.—Dinwiddie calls on England for Help.—The Duke of Newcastle.—Weakness of the British Cabinet.—Attitude of France.—Mutual Dissimulation.—Both Powers send Troops to America.—Collision.—Capture of the "Alcide" and the "Lis."	162

CHAPTER VII

1755.

BRADDOCK.

Arrival of Braddock.—His Character.—Council at Alexandria.—Plan of the Campaign.—Apathy of the Colonists.—Rage of Braddock.—Franklin.—Fort Cumberland.—Composition of the Army.—Offended Friends.—The March.—The French Fort.—Savage Allies.—The Captive.—Beaujeu.—He goes to meet the English.—Passage of the Monongahela.—The Surprise.—The Battle.—Rout of Braddock.—His Death.—Indian Ferocity.— Reception of the Ill News.—Weakness of Dunbar.—The Frontier abandoned	187
--	-----

CHAPTER VIII

1755-1763.

REMOVAL OF THE ACADIANS.

State of Acadia.—Threatened Invasion.—Peril of the English.—Their Plans.—French Forts to be attacked.—Beauséjour and its Occupants.—French Treatment of the Acadians.—John Winslow.—Siege and Capture of Beauséjour.—Attitude of Acadians.—Influence of their Priests.—They refuse the Oath of Allegiance.—Their Condition and Character.—Pretended Neutrals.—Moderation of English Authorities.—The
--	--