CANADIAN TORPEDO BOAT AND 45 LIVES LOST

Forty-four men and a boy, officers and crew of the Canadian torpedo boat Grilse, are believed to have been drowned in the gale that swept the Nova Scotian coast on Tuesday night. At three o'clock Monday afternoon the Grilse, the fastest patrol boat in Canadian waters, sailed out of Halifax harbor for Bermuda. At seven o'clock Tuesday night the gallant little ship, beaten by the hurricane in which she had been caught, was seven miles off Little Hope Light, South Shore. At twenty-eight minutes past seven she sent out an "S. O. S." call. Two minutes later the message "now sinking" was flashed. Since then there has been no word of her. Vessels despatched to the rescue have combed the position in which the Grilse last reported herself and have found no trace of her. Finally it was announced from Ottawa yesterday afternoon that the Minister of the Naval Service feared that the Grilse had been lost at sea with all hands.

This is the worst tragedy that has occurred on the Nova Scotian coast for many years and the news of the disaster to the Grilse has caused deep sorrow here for the brave men who went down with her. "They were picked men," said a naval officer to a press representative last evening. "Every man jack of the crew was of the best, physically and mentally equipped to give the utmost efficiency to the handling of this very important boat in the Canadian Naval Service."

DEUTSCHLAND AGAIN ARRIVED HOME

The German submarine Deutschland has arrived at the Weser River, Germany, making a quick and safe return from Baltimore on her second trip. The greatest injury she does to the Allied cause is the information which her officers, etc., gather in the United States and take home to Germany. Otherwise she is a peaceful merchant ship though carrying nickel and other materials for use in the war.

Yarmouth Line Adopts Table D'Hotel on American Plan For Meals on Steamers
