A substitute for the Seashore. A sort of sick-at-the-stomach-feeling has been experienced by many of our citizens during the past week in town, the result, the doctors say, of the recent rapid changes of temperature from excessive heat to very cool weather. A very good thing to overcome this sick-at-the-stomach or bilious feeling is to be found in Menz's Kidney and Liver Cure—a few doses at a time being sufficient to regulate the disturbed condition of the liver.

Before the looking-glass the mirror youth Of eighteen years stood, with anxious face; Long months he's washed his upper lip, in youth.

How different his emotions, though, when at the age of forty, he before the glass stands. Surveys his crown and realises that with all his hair he's shaved the crown, and that, beyond a doubt, The hair is coming out!

He Was Too Killig. Jane wanted to go to the circus, and John wanted to go to the theater.

"We can go to the theater any time," she said, "but the circus is here for only a week, and we have not always the chance of going to it."

"Well, as you like," said John, "but at least let me go to the circus first, and then we'll go to the theater."

"What consequences?" asked Jane in surprise.

"These consequences," answered John gravely. "Suppose one of the lions should break out of his cage while we were there. It's all over with you!"

"All over with me?"

"Certainly. The lions ain't blind, are they?"

"N-no. But what has that got to do with me?"

"Just this. If you look to me to be sweet enough to eat, how will you look to a raging, roaring, hungry lion? He will think you are a delicious morsel, and you are gone."

"But John, there will be other girls there besides me."

"I know it, but you will be the sweetest one there."

"Very well, John, dear; I think, darling, we'd better go to the theater."—Spare Moments.

She Preferred to Stand. "Take a seat, madam!"

The Broadway car was crowded, and a young lady with a strikingly beautiful face and a splendid figure had entered as these words were uttered. The speaker, a fine, manly fellow of 18, had risen at once and stood smiling in front of her.

The passengers craned their necks. Some uttered audibly, and a horrified look came over the face of the fair passenger as she indignantly turned her back in the face of the precocious youth, who straightway resumed his old position.

He had been sitting on his father's knee.—Truth.

His Regret. The two tramps had been wandering about from beach to beach, and in a useless search for a bite, as almost every place they visited was closed for the summer.

"Anybody at home?" inquired Willie, waiting in the alley as his friend came out.

"Naw," was the disappointed response.

"There are they?"

"Gone to the World's fair."

Willie sighed.

"Better Walker," he said sally, "when I think how this World's fair is ruining our business, I almost wish Columbus hadn't discovered America."—Detroit Free Press.

Explained. An Irishman went to a lawyer with a case, but the attorney was a retainer. The Irishman was poor, and finally the lawyer said he would take the case on a contingency fee. It was settled, but the contingent fee part of the agreement bothered the client.

"I don't know why, I am sure, mum," replied the offended Mrs. Fell, "for I always keep the 'quite absent.'"

Not Her Fault. An old woman who kept a "billage" shop and post-office combined in a remote country parish was continually impressing upon her customers the fact that she always sold the best of everything. One day a lady walked in to purchase some stamps.

"Dear me, Mrs. Fell," she said as she proceeded to stamp her "I cannot make these stamps stick."

"I don't know why, I am sure, mum," replied the offended Mrs. Fell, "for I always keep the 'quite absent.'"

Quite Absent. "My dear Mrs. Fell," said the lawyer, "I have just heard that your husband has been killed."

"My dear Mrs. Fell," said the lawyer, "I have just heard that your husband has been killed."
