

XELLENT DRESSERS

Their society is always sought for. Their good taste is admired—but the shabbily dressed, although sometimes pitied, is praised, never.

Every one is desirous to dress well and improve appearance. And we claim it is their own fault if they don't dress well.

A man enters our store with but one single X. in his pocket, gets dressed from top to bottom—and everything up-to-date, mind you. He goes out xellently dressed and has a $ or 2 left in his pocket to spare.

Won't he feel happy? Yes, sufficiently happy to advise others to follow his example and recommend them to our house.

W. A. Muir, of Lima, O., says:—"I was one of the countless victims of early vice at 15 years of age. The drains on my system were weakening my brain as well as my sexual and nervous system. For ten years I tried scores of doctors, electric belts and patent medicines. Some helped me, none cured. I was giving up in despair, in fact, contemplating suicide when a friend advised me as a last resort to give the New Method Treatment of Drs. K. & K. a fair trial. Without confidence I consented and in three months I was a cured man. I was cured seven years ago—an married and happy. I heartily recommend Drs. K. & K. to my afflicted fellow men."

THE IMMIGRANT

To the poor immigrants that come to our shore,

Let us speak words of cheer in the tenderest tone,

They leave their own country with hearts sad and sore,

For their loved ones are braving the world all alone.

Far, far from the flower-scented heath, and hill,

From the land o' the thistle the kilt and the plaid,

From the land o' the loch, the mountain and rill,

The land o' the true-hearted lassie and lad

Frae the lang toon o' Kirkcaldy, Willie Traill came,

Leaving girl-wife and bairns, leaving all that was dear,

And high on the scroll we refer to as fame

His is one of the many whose names should appear.

Fair Fancy, her magical wings spreading wide,

In ecstasy bids the young dreamer arise,

Now far, far behind him the dark waters glide,

The dreams of his north home gladden his eyes.

In fancy, the creepers wind round like a frill,

The grey sparrow chirps from its nest in the wall,

The prattle of children he hears with a thrill,

The voice of his own Jean answers his call.

To land of the north, o'er wide trackless foam,

Came the blithe Scottish lad with visions so bright,

To toil for his loved ones and build them a home,

But alas for bright hopes now dark as the night.

He dreamed of his loved ones, his own native bowers,

Of the pleasures which waited the dawn of the morn,

The present seemed garished and covered with flowers,

The future looked bright, but secreted its thorn

The heart of the toiler in rapture is stirred,

His pulses are quickened, all troubles seem o'er,
A murmur of joy in his musing is heard,
"I am thankfully blessed, I can ask for no more."

Light-hearted he totts, and time winging by,
The girl-wife afar makes ready to come,
His heart leaps for joy as their meeting draws nigh,

And he crowns her the queen of his northern home.

But, lo! at the mid day night darkness the sky,
The typhoid now breathes its poisonous breath,

It gruesomely pencils its art in his eye,
It colors the cheek with the pallor of death.

Dissolved into woe are the dreams of delight,
Enshrouded and veiled are the visions of bliss,

Bodimented are the hopes which fancy made bright,
Alas, for the sweets of life's honeyed kiss.

To the God of his father's he offered a prayer,
That should he not meet his beloved again,

His Jean and his bairns and their burden of care
He committed to Him, and passed from all pain.

A message of sadness flashed under the sea,
A message which told of a loved one no more,

Which blighted a life of radiant glee
And stung a wife's heart to its innermost core.

The brothers of union with hearts ever kind,
Bore his body away to the bier they had made,

On the green mountain side where the soft summer wind
The requiem sighs where the hero is laid.

C. C. SLACK.

NOTE—This is an o'er true tale, the poor fellow having died here (in Montreal) last week. I knew him well.

The circumstances were so sad I thought best to make a note of it. They got a purse of $200 from his co-workers and sent it to his widow in Scotland. Poor thing—how sad she must be. She was to arrive in Montreal this week.—C. C. S.

After the Cigarette

The cigarette business is somewhat disturbed, for the time being, by the action of the House of Commons.

In the session of 1903 the act which Mr. Bickerdike had in hand fell through, because its passage through the house was not being conducted regularly.

At the present session the experience has been different. So far the progress of the bill has been satisfactory. It has been given a second reading, unexpectedly, because the members of the opposition who were present, with two exceptions, voted for it. They did this in order to embarrass the government, which will now have to amend or kill the measure. Public opinion, as it is expressed in parliament, is divided upon the subject.

A Painful Injury

Respecting the injury sustained by Mr. Monie Brown in the G. T. R. yards on Tuesday of last week, the Times says: "He had just come in with a train from Belleville and was engaged in shunting and placing several cars and was riding on the brake-beam when his left foot slipped and was instantly caught between the brake shoe and flange of the wheel and was crushed and squeezed severely."

Fortunately the foot did not get completely under the flange of the wheel or it would have been utterly destroyed.

After he was rescued from his perilous position Mr. Brown was removed to his home on Wall street, where Dr. Bowie was at once summoned. An examination of the injuries sustained showed that while the foot was terribly squeezed and bruised no bones were broken and that the victim of the accident may hope to be around again in a few days.

Mr. Brown was for a number of years a supervisor of one of the cottages at the Brockville Asylum, and left that institution about two years ago to enter upon railway service on the Grand Trunk.
