TO CURE FEVER CHILLS.

And such complaints as "Shivers" and ague we recommend Nerviline very highly. Twenty drops of Nerviline taken in hot water with a little sugar three times daily not only stops the chills but knocks out the disease completely. Nerviline had a direct action on fever chills and removes the conditions causing them. In stomach and bowel troubles Nerviline never fails. It's pleasant to the taste, quick to relieve and always cures permanently. Get a 25c. bottle to-day.

Ladies Trained at a Canine Heepital in Lendon-Siek Dogs Nursed Just Like Siek Men.

Sick dogs require nursing, just like sick men, and the Dogs' Protection League of London, Eng., keeps a staff of trained nurses. Two veterinary surgeons are also retained, so that the four-footed patients have every care and attention bestowed on them.

Now that he is in Italy, with more leisure and less liability to interruption; he has gone to work systematically to complete it. According to the personal confession of the humorist, Mrs. Clemens "edits all his stories," and to his daughter, who acts as type-writer, he pays "regular union rates." Mrs. and Miss Clemens are charming ladies, and the genial humorist has a home life happier than falls to the lot of many great writ-ers. It must be some years, accord-ing to the calendar, since Mark married Miss Olivia Langdon of Elmira, N. child of so famous a man, she observed that it was rather hard on her to be the daughter of an individual who was always expected to live up to the reputation of being "a funny man," and it is a fact that Mark Twain is never taken seriously, excepting of course by his own intimate friends, who know how much he yearns to write an absolutely humorless book.

Mark Twain is an illustration of the public's determination to keep their favorites in one groove. They don't want the man who wrote "A Tramp Abroad," the creator of Huck Finn and Tom Sawyer, ever to write anything serious. The trouble is that Mark Twain really has a serious side to him, and his own favorites among his books are "The Prince and the Pauper" and "Joan of Arc." But Mark will have his revenge years hence, when we are all dead and that terrible autobiography he is now writing about his contemporaries is published at last.

It is odd that Mark cannot appreciate Thackeray, Goldsmith or Addison, while Meredith simply moves him to roars of laughter.

Wannipeg, Man., March 21.—(Special).—One of the best known and most popular locomotive engineers running out of Winnipeg on the fo. P. R. is Mr. Ben Rafferty, who lives at 175 Maple street. And Mr. Rafforty gives some advice to railway men that in these days of blocksdes and strain and worry none can fafford to overlook. That advice is "use Dodd's Kidney Pills." Mr. Rafferty says:

Dodd's Kidney Pills." Mr. Rafferty says:

"Years of long runs on the railway had broken down my constitution. My back gave out entirely. Terrible sharp outting pains would follow one another, thil I felt as if I were being sliced away piecemeal.

"I would come in from a run itired to death. My sole desire would be to get rest and elseb, and they were the very things I could not get. Finally, I got so bad I had to lay off work.

Finally I got so bad I had bous, on work.

"After being laid up ten days I started to use Dodd's Kidney Pills. The first night after using them I shept soundly. In three days I threw away the belt I had worm for years, and now I have not the slightest pain in the back, I sleep soundly and wake up joyous and refreshed, and Dodd's Kidney Pills did it."

The Oxford Press Syndicate value the formula for making the thin, tough paper used in printing their Bibles at a quarter of a million sterling, it having cost them over twenty-five years of hard work and twenty thousand pounds in cash to discover and perfect the process. Even more valuable, probably, is the secret of the manufacture of the paper upon which the notes of the Bank of England are printed, which belongs, as is generally known, to the Portals of Laverstoke, who have accumulated a fortune from it inside of a couple of generations. The brilliant crimson cloth of which the Cardinals' robes at the Vatican are made has been supplied for generations. the Cardinals' robes at the Vatican are made has been supplied for generations past by the same family of cloth merchants at Burtscheil, near Aix-la-Chapelle, the secret process by which the dye is distilled having been handed down from father to son. The family (says a writer in Chambers' Journal) curiously enough, is of Huguenot descent, and its members are to this day staunch Profestants.

About a hundred and fifty years ago there resided in the town of Doncaster a certain barber named Martin. To him there came one day to be shaved a soldier, who mentioned in the course of conversation that he was obliged to return to his regiment at York on foot, as he had not the wherewithal to pay his had not the wherewithal to pay his coach fare. Mr. Martin, having himself known poverty in his younger days, lent the man sufficient money for his purpose, and a little while later received it back, according to promise but there was according to promise; but there was something else in the envelope; a crumpled pa-per on which was written a recipe for a certain preparat, on. which, explained the sender in a covering let-ter, he had long used upon the boots of the men of his corps. The barber at once made a small quantity ac-cording to directions; found it excellent, entered into a partnership with a friend of his named Day, a harnessmaker, of Tavistock street London, and was rewarded for his manufacturers, blossom forth into one of the biggest businesses of its kind in the world.—Glasgow Ga-

A Story of Gladstone's Boyheod. John Morley a few days after the publication of his life of "Gladstone" told in a speech at Sheffield a story of Mr. Gladstone's boyhood.
"The lad," he said, "was in the over his estate. The farmer would pause before each field to describe it, and before every cow, horse and pig he would make a brief biographical address.

"Finally the

"Finally they came to a small field "Finally they came to a small field that contained a large black bull,
"That is a fine bull there, Master William' said the farmer, 'a very fine, strong two-year-old bull.'
"Two years old?' said the boy.
"'Yes, two years, sir.'
"'How do you tell its age?'
"Why, by its horns.'
"The little boy frowned. He mused a moment. Then his countenance cleared.
"'Ah, he said. 'By its horns. I see, Two horns—two years.'"

It is an encouraging thought that when we really brace up and try to overcome misfortune we are very likely to gain the sympathy and often the help of those who have before hindered us.

There is a story of a wise old elephant which illustrates this point. There is a big African elephant at the London zoological garden which was formerly much troubled by the bad aim of people who threw crackers toward the cage so they would fall in between the barrier and the cage, beyond the reach of the animal and the thrower alike. But the elephant has found that by using his trunk as a bellows it can blow the biscuit to the barrier, where it may be picked up again. Of course the clever elephant is rewarded by a better throw and gets the biscuit.—Boys' World.
