The deceased was born at Fair Isle, Scotland, about seventy-four years ago, and came to Canada when twelve years of age and has resided in Newcastle practically ever since. ### BRANCH BANKS

In the interests of economy specially to reduce overhead; a scheme is said to have been adopted by Canadian banks whereby the branch banks will be reduced in number where conditions permit of curtailing that detail of bank operation. It has been pointed out that in some cities there are a great many branch banks and that while this situation is of considerable convenience to the neighborhood wherein the branch is located the cost of such ramified functioning is appreciable; hence economy calls for centralization. While a bank closing a branch in a district might lose some business to a competitor whose central bank was closer to the neighborhood affected than the central bank of the institution curtailing; in the general putting in force of a scheme of reduction in overhead there would be a fair distribution of loss and gain.

Large Herds of Caribou Seen in New Brunswick

Fredericton Gleaner:—Two large caribou herds which were sighted last week by game wardens making a tour of the game areas on the headwaters of the Tobique, Nepisiquit and Miramichi rivers have caused provincial officials to believe that these game animals have been returning to New Brunswick in greater numbers than had been supposed. In New Brunswick caribou are now protected by a closed season which is being continued by an amendment to the Game Act now before the Legislature.

The game wardens who reported having sighted the two herds of caribou were engaged in a general survey of what is considered one of the provinces' best game areas and also reported that from all indications the big game had wintered well in that section of the province. There was little indication of the presence of wild cats in the area traversed.

C. N. R. Baggage-men Averts Disaster

In a letter to Sir Henry L. Thornton President of the Canadian National Railways a passenger draws attention to the dangers incurred by suburban travellers heedlessly ignoring the regulations devised for their safety and the presence of mind displayed by an employee whereby a tragedy was averted.

Baggage-man Fred Binette of the Canadian National Railways proved a friend indeed to seven venturesome passengers on the 5.45 train out of Montreal to Vaudreuil. As the train pulled into Dominion station a party of seven passengers anxious to clip a few minutes by leaving the train on the wrong side and crossing the tracks hurried through the baggage compartment of the combination car. They had about to jump to the ground when Baggage-man Binette caught the sound of an approaching train. He rushed forward and thrust himself in front of the men. They resented his action but he pushed them back forcibly. At that instant the fast freight thundered by. The passengers blanched at their narrow escape; but for the baggage-man's prompt action they would have been run down.
