THE KENT ELECTION.

The appearance of the attorney general on the political platform in Kent may be friendship, the American flag has gone intaken as an indication that the campaign in that county is fairly opened. The cordial reception given the leader of the government by the people of that county augurs well for the prospects of the government candidate, and if the contests were fought out on local issues there would be no doubt as to his success; but if dominion issues are introduced, as they years Larkin & Co. made $950,000 profit have been in almost all the local contests, the return of a supporter of the local government will be more doubtful. It may be, however, that the dominion government and its supporters have all they can attend to just at present, to keep on deck, without interfering in Kent.

Of course Daniel will be there with his "advisedly" and "in my judgment" in company no doubt with the yellow satchel saint of the Moncton Times. There, too, will no doubt be heard the allwise Stockton and the erudite and youthful Alward.

The boy candidate will put in an appearance with an explanation for his sudden conversion from gritism to toryism. Powell and Dr. Atkinson will take along the minority report on the public accounts, with an explanation of their manly conduct in regard thereto. These worthies will be assisted by a good contingent from York. Gregory, the leader, with Everett as first lieutenant, will be there shedding tears over the poor set tlers on the Tobique, deprived of their fishing rights, some of whom are now languishing in the penitentiary as the result of Gregory's defence. Crocket, of the Gleaner, will be there to gather together the worst elements of the place and work up the applause at the end of Gregory's well rounded periods. Zeb's lecture on the Fiji is to be used as an introductory performance to work up the interest before Gregory begins.
