PREMIER ASQUITH ASKS FOR MONEY AND REVIEWS THE WAR SITUATION.

LONDON, To-day.

The seventh note credit, since the outbreak of the war, bringing up the total to $6,310,000,000 was moved in the Commons yesterday afternoon by Premier Asquith. The amount asked for to-day is $1,250,000,000. The Premier announced that nearly three million men enlisted. He made this statement in reviewing the financial and military situations, so far as military exigencies permitted, but this requirement necessitated in many instances only vague references to the trend of events. The growing expenditures of the war was emphasized by the Premier. He said the average daily cost from April 1st to the end of June £2,700,000; from July 1st to 15th, £3,000,000; from July 15th to September 11th, £3,500,000. Thus the total for this period is £12,200,000,000, or £500,000,000. There has been repaid £50,000,000 to the Bank of England; £50,000,000 has been lent to foreign Governments and £28,000,000 lent to the Dominions. Comparing the actual expenditures since the last vote credit with the estimate, Asquith said that there has been some abnormal items to disclose which could not be made in the public interest, but the House might take it that these expenditures were incurred for the purpose of financing necessary operations. Part of this amount was to be repaid in the course of a few months; the remainder represented advances for future expenditure. Asquith estimated that the weekly gross expenditure henceforth would not exceed thirty-five million pounds. It was his opinion that the new vote would carry the country through the third week of November. These figures throw some light on many of the contributions we are making to war. He continued I do not wish to say even that we are doing all we can, all we ought, but as mischievous attempts are constantly being made to depreciate them with, I give some comparisons between peace and war figures. Since the outbreak of war enlisting will be found to aggregate not far short of three million in the army and navy.

is concentrated nourishment made from whole wheat and malted barley.

It supplies all the nutriment of these wholesome grains, retaining all the vital body-building salts—potash, lime, iron, etc.—lacking in white bread and many other foods, but which are absolutely necessary to rebuilding of sinew, brain and nerves.

Grape-Nuts is partly predigested in its making—hence demands but little effort from the digestive organs.

Delicious and splendidly satisfying, it's the ideal school ration for children—a wonderful builder for adults.

KITCHENER'S REVIEW OF WAR SITUATION.

LONDON, To-day.

The Germans appear almost to have shot their bolt, said Earl Kitchener, Secretary of War. To-day their advance in Russia which at one time averaged five miles a day now is diminished to less than one mile a day. Kitchener's statement made review of the war in the House of Commons. The response of the country to calls for recruits had been little short of marvellous, but the problem however to insure the field force being kept at full strength is causing great attention, and will, I hope, soon receive a practical solution. I do not for one instant doubt that whatever sacrifice may be necessary will be undertaken cheerfully by our people. Regarding the military operations, the War Secretary said, for the last few months the front held by the Allies in the West had been practically unchanged. This does not mean that there has been any relaxation of offensive work on the part of the forces in the field, for the continuous local fighting which has taken place all along the line called for a display of trenching and fortification. Meanwhile our posts have been much strengthened, not only by a careful elaboration of the system of trench fortifications, but also by a large increase in the number of heavy guns, which have been placed along our lines. The Germans recently on several occasions used gas and liquid fire, but these have been met by our troops with asphyxiating shells, but these forms of attacks, lacking as they now do the element of surprise, failed in their object and lost much of their offensive value, owing to the steps taken by us to counteract the effect of these poisonous methods. Our new armies have become trained and ready to take the field, considerable reinforcements have been sent out to join Field Marshal Sir John French's army. You will be glad to hear his opinion of these troops, communicated to me. He writes: The units appear to be thoroughly well concentrated, equipped. Several units of artillery have been tested behind the firing line trenches, and I received very good reports of them. Their shooting has been extremely good. They are quite fit to take their place in the line. These new divisions have now had an opportunity of acquiring by experience of actual warfare a portion of the necessary training as soldiers, which it was impossible to give them in this country. Once acquired it will enable them effectively to take their place in the line, with the rest of the British Army. With these additional reinforcements, amounting to eleven divisions (about two hundred thousand men), Sir John French has been able to extend his front along their extended line, from some places notably near Arras and Alsace they have made substantial progress. French trenches along the entire front have been developed and strengthened, and now everywhere present a network of almost impregnable positions. Of this I was able to satisfy myself during a visit lately to the front, and in a report through General Joffre. I was profoundly impressed with the high state of efficiency and morale of the French army. In my opinion, the war, said Earl Kitchener, few episodes stand out more prominently and more creditably than the masterly manner in which the Russian army, distributed along a line 750 miles have been handled, while facing the violent assaults from an enemy greatly superior in numbers, especially in guns and munitions. The success of this great war was guaranteed and the action had been rendered possible by the really superior fighting qualities of Russian soldiers who in every case where an actual conflict had taken place, had shown themselves infinitely superior to the enemy. This fighting quality of the Russian army empowers her able generals and competent staff to carry out the immensely difficult operations of retirement and move the line over some 100 to 200 miles, without allowing the enemy to break through any part or by surrounding their forces bring about a tactical position, which might have involved the surrender of a considerable portion of the Russian army. Thus we see the Russian Army remaining to-day intact as a fighting force. It doubtless has suffered severely from the fighting to which it had been subjected during recent months, but the German forces also had to pay a heavy toll for their advance into the trenches, and will venture to say until the present grips are relaxed which armies suffered. They succeeded in forcing the line, the artillery taking several forts, he said; but all accounts show the Russian retreat is being conducted in a most masterly fashion and that the Russian army is still unbroken. The assumption of the supreme command by the Czar is the most significant proof yet given of the unalterable determination from the highest to the lowest of the Russian people. It must not be forgotten that the Russians with vast territory have always been able ultimately to envelop and annihilate large invading armies. In this case certainly is no less capable to-day than she was a century ago. As regards the net result, all that Germans can place to their credit is that at enormous sacrifice they have captured certain fortresses, but our recent experience shows that the best fortification is practically the only one that can effectively resist the new machinery of war are those which can be quickly dug in deep soil, such trenches as the most carefully fortified places, of which engineers until lately were so proud. The German staff failed to have shot their bolt. Their advance into Russia which at one time was carried out at an average daily rate of five miles has now diminished to less than one mile a day, and we see forces which they boastfully described as defeated broken troops fleeing before them, still doggedly and

ROUMANIA EXPECTED TO ENTER WAR SOON.

LONDON, To-day.

Roumania is expected to enter the war soon. The massing of German and Austrian troops on the Roumanian frontier has resulted in the Balkan nation making preparation for eventualities. A large part of her army already has been mobilized, and reservists in other countries have been ordered home.

THE LONDON BUDGET.

LONDON, To-day.

Field Marshal Von Hindenburg's drive toward the Dvinsk, Vilna railway is not progressing as fast as his previous enterprises of a similar kind have done, and except at one or two points about midway between these towns where his cavalry cut the railway it is still being stubbornly opposed by the Russians, who are making vigorous counter-attacks. Von Hindenburg has however reached a point West of the Bridgehead across from the town of Dvinsk and is preparing to attack that fortified area. Elsewhere the German advance has also slowed up, while in Galicia the Russians are still attacking, and according to unofficial reports from Bucharest and other points, the Austro-German armies are falling back across the Dneister River. Just north of the Galician border the Russians also are on the offensive and making efforts to recapture the fortress of Dubno, which the Austrians took last week. This offensive in the South, it is believed, will have an effect on the rest of the front, as reinforcements must soon be sent there or the Teutonic allies will run the danger of being outflanked. Despite this the Austrians have sent reinforcements against Italy and have at some parts of the line assumed the offensive. The country is so rough and the Italians since they declared war, have been so successful in capturing important positions for defence that an advance by the Austrians cannot for some time threaten the defenders. The operations however are likely to take on a more interesting character. Heavy guns continue the bombardment along the Western front, and in the Vosges another battle is in progress for the possession of Hartmannswellerkopf which has changed hands so often during the past few months. According to despatches from Holland, British warships have again attacked German positions on the Belgian coast. Air raids by allied aeroplanes on towns now occupied by Germans and the Zeppelins on England are a daily occurrence.
