No Compromise.

London, Oct. 13.—The sinking of the steamer Leinster gave a stunning blow to whatever feeling existed in England for a peace of reconciliation. The affair caused more indignation than any submarine exploit since the sinking of the Lusitania. The contrast between Prince Maximilian's benevolent utterances and Germany's day-by-day military and naval policies is the text for most of the newspaper sermons on the situation. Not only the slaughter of women and children on the Leinster and the Hiranu Maru, but the German refusal to exchange prisoners, and the stories coming from the front of the needless devastation of Belgium and Northern France, are working together to put a damper on any sentiment of leniency toward the Central Powers.

It appears plain that the German peace proposals are regarded with more disfavor here to-day than they were a week ago. Even some prominent papers with pacifist leanings are demanding punishment for the violations of civilized warfare as a necessary part of any peace terms. The words expressed by Arthur J. Balfour, Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, were symptomatic of the public feeling. Mr. Balfour is usually most scrupulous in his observance of the traditions of diplomacy for polite phrases under all circumstances. The public interprets his remarks as a sign that the Government does not carry any leanings toward a compromise with Germany.

A Great Editor.

(From the New York Times.)
The retirement of Mr. Robert Donald from the editorship of The London Daily Chronicle, which is implied by the sale of the paper to Sir Henry Dalziel, is a loss to journalism and to public life. It is not without interest to America especially, for Mr. Donald as a controller of one of England's great newspapers was a warm and consistent friend of the United States. A stalwart Liberal, he was never afraid to say a good word for his opponents in politics when he thought the occasion warranted it. A whole-hearted supporter of the war, he has on more than one occasion criticized the Government, even criticised his long-time friend, Mr. Lloyd George. Holding strong and steady beliefs, he was the creature of no man and no party. Mr. Donald, who is a Scotsman, began life as a young reporter, made steady headway, and presently as editor of The Municipal Journal in London showed a grasp of public affairs and a capacity in administration which eventually took him to the editorial chair of The Daily Chronicle. He had a wide experience in his younger days, for he served in Edinburgh, London, New York and Paris. For a generation The Daily Chronicle had been a famous property. Under Mr. Donald it has grown still more powerful and respected. His paper was characteristically devoid of flashiness. He never attacked for the sake of attacking, and never took up a cause because it was popular. The consequence was that The Chronicle maintained and extended its influence as a sane, practical, and far-seeing Liberal journal. He had as his friends philosophers, statesmen, famous authors, and the captains of industry. It is safe to say that no British editor in recent times had so wide a range of respect from leaders in the various fields of thought and action.

Irish Roused.

London, Oct. 13.—(British Wireless Service)—Dublin is in deep mourning for the victims of the torpedoed Irish mail boat Leinster and flags are at half-mast everywhere. The mortuaries both at Dublin and Kingstown are crowded with dead, while in the hospitals there is barely room for the injured.
Vessels bound in through the channel report having sighted man-of-war amidst floating wreckage. These are being brought in by Admiralty drifters.
The Nationalist papers express their abhorrence of the deed in the strongest language. "Any nation," says the Independent, "which condones the perpetration of a crime so cruel puts itself outside the pale of civilization. Indignation at the enemy's act should powerfully stimulate recruiting throughout the country. The impulse to exact retribution for the murders of the helpless passengers and crew of the Leinster will not, we believe, exhaust itself in idle denunciation of a crime so horrible."
The Freeman's Journal declares that "the hideous facility of these atrocities is enough to make the blood of even the coldest boil, and the deliberate fashion in which it was planned and executed will rouse against the perpetrators the indignation not only of the Irish people, but of the whole world."
