CHAPTER XII

Captain Glynn's unhappy bride does not wait to hear any further details of the business like reasons which induced him to marry her. She shrinks away from the door with a chill sense of terror and dismay hounding her. Something dreadful has happened to her—that is all she feels or knows just now; for her brain is bewildered, and a heavy weight seems lying on her heart.

She goes up the staircase and through the corridor to her own room again, where she drops upon the nearest seat and stares vacantly at the door. Thus the maid finds her some time later when she comes in with the tea tray, all smiles and importance and deference to "young Mrs. Glynn," as the other maids are delightedly calling the bride among themselves, and heartily envying "Miss Pitts" her post.

"Law me, ma'am, it's time you had a cup of tea!" the girl exclaims, with concern and something like alarm in her eyes. "You're as white as your dress, ma'am! Let me take it off at once and put on your dressing gown for a minute. It's rather light-laced, ma'am, and it's such a weight of silk in the train! Oh, my goodness, you've sat on your veil and crushed it dreadful!"

"What matter?" Yolande says, smiling at the maid's anxiety. "I shall never wear it again, you know. Pull it off, and these orange ribbons, and shove them into the wardrobe drawer. I'm married now!"

"So you are, ma'am," agrees Pitts, with a respectful, envious, admiring smile, and to such unobtrusive, handsome, high-bred-looking gentleman, too, as Captain Glynn is!

"Pitts is quite sure, from previous experience, that her employer will be returned, to such blanches of pleasure and happiness, and she is simply dumfounded at the reception with which her words meet."

"Yes," the girl little says, in a cold, precise tone, and a hard, matter-of-face manner. "Captain Glynn is a handsome man and a well-bred man. If he weren't, I should not have married him, you know. It supposes I have pleased my eyes to please my heart, as the old saying has it."

"Goodness forbid, ma'am!" says Pitts, in a shocked tone, pausing in folding up the bridal dress, and uneasily watching the pale face and glittering eyes and the cold, mechanical smile. "I wonder has anything gone wrong and vexed her?" Pitts muses. "She do look queer, and her voice doesn't sound like her own voice."

But in the greater interest of arraying the bride in her traveling costume of brown cashmere and broche velvet, with bonnet and gloves to match in shade, and a handsome fur shoulder cape and muff of rich brown skunk to finish off the toilet, Pitts forgets all lesser interests.

"But, low, ma'am; you are so dreadful pale," she says, in tones of dissatisfaction; "and you haven't hardly touched your tea."

"No, I can't drink it—I can't!" the young wife replies hoarsely and wildly. "I feel cold and faint; my very heart feels cold and feeble, Pitts, as if it were going to stop beating altogether!"

"A drop of brandy, Miss Yolande—I beg your pardon, ma'am," whispers Pitts coaxingly. "I know cook has a little in her room, so I can get it in a second. She was taken that bad last night with a pain in her chest that she had to have just a wee drop—"

"Get it for me! Get it at once!" Yolande interrupts, sharply; and Pitts rushes off, and in less than a minute returns with a flask half full of cognac and a wineglass.

She puts it down on the toilet table, and, as she turns round for the water carafe, Yolande pours out a sherry glass full, and, ere the horrified maid can prevent her, drinks off the fiery liquid "neat."

"Oh, good Heavens! Oh, law, miss! It'll get up to your head," gasps Pitts, nearly crying with fright. "Drink

WANTS TO HELP OTHER WOMEN

Grateful for Health Restored by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Toronto, Ont.—"I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for backache and for weak and dreary feelings caused by my condition. Sometimes I felt so bad that I couldn't do my housework. My neighbor told me of your medicine and I read about it in the 'Toronto Telegram' and thought I would take it. I got very good results. It built me up and I have held several friends what it has done for me. You may use this testimonial as it may be of help to some one who has suffered as I have."—Mrs. J. Lee, 25 Harvie Ave., Toronto, Ont.

Mrs. Lee is willing to write to any girl or woman suffering from such troubles, and answer any questions they may like to ask.

Women suffering from female troubles causing backache, irregularities, pains, bearing-down feelings, and weakness should take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Not only is the worth of this splendid medicine shown by such cases as this, but for nearly fifty years letters like this have been received from thousands of women.

Want to Withdraw Wheat From Market.

Washington, July 27.—(By Canadian Press)—The American Farm Bureau Federation intends to press hard for the adoption of its plan to have 200,000,000 bushels of wheat withdrawn from the market this year and financed through the new intermediate credit banks, which were authorized in the last session of Congress. This is the plan which the federation has recommended and which has been urged on the Secretary of Agriculture. It is contended that the 200,000,000 bushels will be the surplus this year and if it is not held of the market, wheat prices, already low, will be demoralized, with great loss to the farmers. On the other hand, it is denied the plan contemplates indirect government subsidizing of wheat or subsidy for the farmer at the expense of the consumer.

Gray Silver, Washington representative of the American Farm Bureau Federation, holds that there is no other way to protect the interests of the wheat grower and that unless this method is followed, there will be almost irresistible demand for the fixing of the price of wheat by the government. Mr. Silver points out that the farmers will need no action by Congress, by President Harding or the Department of Agriculture to carry out the plan. He says the farmers are simply proposing to do what the law entitles them to do and to use the credit machinery which has already been provided for their benefit.

Under the law, he points out, the farmers can obtain credit up to 75 per cent of value, through the intermediate credit banks, on wheat and other agricultural products. As he views it, it is now up to the Government to go ahead and carry out the intent of Congress when it enacted last session the new credits legislation.

As Mr. Silver explains the Farm Bureau Federation proposal, the farmer would sell his grain to his cooperative marketing association. The association would take a receipt for the grain but it would be stored in the farmer's granary, the association would then take the receipts and borrow from the intermediate credits bank on the strength of them. The proceeds of the loan would be distributed to members of the co-operative association in proportion to wheat furnished. With this arrangement made, the wheat would be marketed gradually, when prices were favorable, and not dumped on the market at once.

SUFFICE TO ENCIRCLE GLOBE.

LOBSON, July 28.—(A.P.)—Colonel Saccadura Cahral, one of the Portuguese aviators who flew from Lisbon to Rio de Janeiro, referring recently to his project of flying around the world, said his itinerary would be divided into three parts.

The first would be from Lisbon to Japan, 9,870 miles; second, Japan to Newfoundland, 7,580 miles; third, Newfoundland to Lisbon by way of Fayal and Ponta Delgada, 2,140 miles.

On the basis of an average speed of 70 miles an hour, the aviator would expect to spend 280 hours in the air.

It is estimated that the Free State army now consists of 49,000 men, and before the end of the year the Minister of Defense hopes to bring this figure down to 35,000. The government is puzzled to know what to do with the 20,000 soldiers when they are demobilized. The problem is common to all Europe where, through a disturbance of markets, there are more men than can be absorbed in industry. Fortunately, the Irish Free State is in a better position to absorb these men than most other countries would be. It starts off with the important fact that it is a creditor nation, exporting each year a great deal more than it imports.
