> TINY IS DEAD. Tiny is dead; Sir Archibald Maclain is in tears, and all London is sad. But it is consoling to think of the grand opportunity which that death affords to Mr. Alfred Austin, England's poet laureate. He can knock out "La Mort d'Arthur" with "La Mort d'Tiny," and make the Queen

> But who was Tiny, anyway? Well, we reply that he was the littlest yellow dog in the world. From the tip of his snout to the root of his tail he measured exactly four inches. He could go to sleep comfortable in the hand of a child. In canine parlance he was a toy terrier. His appetite was always delicate, but at his last din-ner he ate too much tripe, and indigestion was the consequence. His physician thought he could pull him through, and nobody expected a catastrope; but the unexpected arrived. Now he has glass eyes and a skin full of stuffing; and in this condition Sir Archibald has presented him to the London Zoo. It now only remains for us to wait in patience for the coming poem from the pen of the poet laureate on "La Mort de Tiny."
