An English paper says that penal servitude is, as now carried out in England, a very dreadful punishment indeed. From the dock the convict is carted away in the prison van, and on his arrival at the jail the heavy gates are shut to, with a horrible sound, behind him. He is thrust into a narr we cell, there to remain without companionship for nine months, scarcely ever hearing a human voice, save the warder's, fed on coarse food, his fate is sealed for thirty-six weeks, and after that he will probably be sent to another establishment. thirty-six weeks, and after that he will probably be sent to another establishment where the discipline is somewhat less severe. The nine months' solitary confinement of a five years' convict is hard to bear. About five feet from the floor is a peeph hole. The warder can look in at any moment, and the dread of this constant supervision induces in sensitive prisoners nervous anyiety, in such cases the most nervous anxiety, in such cases the most severe part of the punishment inflicted on them. The period of solitary confinement at an end, they are allowed to work in gangs, under a strict and purposely vexatious discipline.

As to immortality, Mr. Beecher said that the belief in it was the joy of the world, and why should men try to get rid of it? There was no use of questioning it. It was best for the mass of people to believe in it. If it was questioned, proof of it could not be found in science; still the theory of evolution showed a perpetual going on from lower to higher forms, from worse to better. So hopes all pointed to an on-going of the race to a higher hereafter. Another thing was that Christ was the highest authority in morals and religion. He was an expert, and as men believed in the authority of experts in human science, so they should believe in Christ's authority. He said there was a future who tend down a micket fence and over the science and over the said there was a future that the tail to is recorded in the tail of scrottlat is in your blood. Inherited or acquired it is there, and Ayer's Sarsaparilla alone will effectually eradicate it.
