New Cure for Corns.

When biting frosts make people shiver, And paralyze the heart and liver, When chilling winds would skin a toad, When we are forced to go abroad, On a very breath Jack Frost embraces, And C.ingles from bearded faces.

Kind friends! I modestly would hint, When ye perceive this good Clear print, If not inclined to wear a sheet, Look Low! and thin upon your feet, Though smiles betray your disposition, Book laughter grin for the physician, When soles are hot on leather uppers You may save pounds by applying ointment.

Crack on the hills you may encounter, From every shoe both old and tender, Rheumatism, colic, and the ague, Gout, and corns too, may plague you, And many a life I do assure you, From which I'm anxious to cure you, By selling Boots of your dimension, Well worthy of your strict attention.

My Boots are not from prison sent, But made in Morpeth, Chatham, Kent, Nor are they glued by steam together, But made by hand of trusty leather, And I'll guarantee

If you don't try them, you'll never see, Look out for Wilson's Big Brick store! I don't live there! I but call next door! You will me find, I am most fervent, Your most obedient humble servant.
