THE HORSE GUARDS AND THE WAR OFFICE.

—Besides other notices of motion on the relations of the Commander-in-Chief and the Minister of War, Lord Elcho has on the paper the following:—"To ask the First Lord of the Treasury whether, under the warrant appointing the Commander-in-Chief of the Army, any doubt arises as to the relative position of the Commander-in-Chief and the Secretary of State for War; whether it is or is not the case that the authority of the Secretary of State is supreme in all that relates to the administration of the army, and that it can, if necessary, be brought to bear upon minor promotions as well as upon the higher military appointments, and also upon matters connected with the discipline of the army; whether, in the present administration of the army, there is any approach to dual government other than that which necessarily arises from the Secretary of State for War and his staff being in one building, while the officer charged with the discipline of the army is with his staff located in another; and whether any steps are being taken, or about being taken, with a view to the more speedy and economical transaction of business, to concentrate the War Department in one building."

THE ROYAL NAVAL RESERVE.—We (Army and Navy Gazette) understand that a circular has been addressed from the Admiralty to the various captains of the Coastguard ships with a view of extracting their opinions on the Royal Naval Reserves. It is to be hoped that these officers will bear in mind that in the event of war this reserve must be looked upon in the light of our "second line of defence," which must never be broken through. There are many still living who have not forgotten the horrors which reigned while a "hot press raged." We surely should never have occasion to witness a repetition of the scenes which then prevailed; but only let the scheme for supporting a properly constituted reserve be reversed, we should unquestionably, on the breaking out of hostilities, be compelled either to have recourse to a ruinous bounty, or to use force in order to fill up the complements of the ships required for immediate service. We trust that old fashioned prejudices will be forgotten, and that the officers of the Royal Naval will combine with good will to secure the sympathies of their brethren in the Mercantile Marine.
