

Do You Want a Book to Read?

Here are two new novels that are to be reckoned with

The Vice Admiral of the Blue

By Roland Burnham Molineux.

A biographical romance of the love story of Lord Nelson and Lady Hamilton.

Speaking of the novel, Mr. G. Murray, B.A., in the Montreal Star, says:

"The routs and magnificent entertainments given by her (Lady Hamilton) on Grosvenor Square—the jollity of the old Johnsonian tavern, the 'Cheshire Cheese,' where Hardy meets Walter Scott, Southey, Moore, Campbell, and other literary men, and witnesses a remarkable fight between a country squire and a professional pugilist—the magnificence of the Christmas festivities in the English country house of a century ago—all these and many other striking incidents furnish a picturesque setting for a story of love and adventure which can hardly be surpassed in interest."

Sir Henry Morgan Buccaneer

By Cyrus Townsend Brady.

Mr. Brady is fond of dashing themes, and certainly here he has found a subject to suit his most exacting mood. He has taken Morgan, the most famous and at the same time most infamous pirate in the world, as the chief figure in his picturesque and rattling romance.

The reader will find adventure enough in this tale, which has besides a strong love-interest in the story of the beautiful Mercedes and the gallant Alvarado.
