

Board two years after his sentence of parole was ended. If he was convicted of an indictable offense which legally means a sentence of more than six months — the waiting period is five years.
An inquiry can be made by the Board to see if its recommendations to the governor-in-council that the inmate be granted a pardon under the Criminal Records Act.

