

either improve to an extent sufficient to justify their admission into the Sanatorium, or give evidence that they are incurable.

It is the sad duty of the Trustees to record here their deep sense of the great loss sustained by the Sanatorium in the death of Dr. Jas. E. Graham, one of the visiting physicians. He had taken an active, intelligent, and sympathetic interest in the institution from its inception, and his frequent visits were always helpful to the management. Over three years ago he aided in selecting the present site on Muskoka Lake, and he passed away a few months since while sojourning as a patient in the edifice he had helped to plan. In him the Sanatorium lost a faithful friend, the medical profession in Canada one of its brightest ornaments, and society at large a member greatly respected wherever he was known for his noble professional ideals and high Christian character.

The trustees have much pleasure in bearing testimony to the efficient manner in which the members of the resident staff have discharged their duties. Dr. Elliott, the medical superintendent, has been most unremitting in his watchful care over the patients. Mrs. Hawkins, the lady superintendent, and Miss Breckon, the head nurse, have been assiduous in their efforts to make the institution successful.

To the Visiting Physicians a debt of gratitude is due from the management, for the valuable assistance they have rendered. Dr. Jas. E. Graham, who died recently in the Sanatorium, besides being eminent as a general practitioner, had for many years made a specialty of the treatment of consumption. Dr. Davison, Dr. Powell, Dr. Britton, and Dr. W. P. Caven have all had extensive experience in dealing with the same disease, and Dr. McDonagh and Dr. Wishart are specialists in diseases of the throat. They all have taken a warm interest in the progress of the Sanatorium, and cordially aided it by many practical suggestions.
