THE CAMPAIGN

Dr. Winchester in rising, said: "What Shall My Last Word Be? I have much to praise God for since I came to St. John. It has done me good to see the Catholicity of spirit among the ministers and I am thankful for the things I have seen and heard in connection with this campaign." He spoke from the 22nd chapter of Job: "For then shalt thou have delight in the Almighty and lift up thy face towards God." "I have seen people whom I have had repugnance for, yet when I became acquainted with them I have found them lovable people. The reason that today people don't serve God is because they don't know Him. First acquaint yourself with Him. To know Him you must think, and that means meditation. Meditation leads to expression. What is in the well will come up in the bucket. The question will be what can I do for God? Take the Bible and what it has done out of St. John and the Dominion of Canada, and what will we have left? My last word to you is, think on God, meditate, and goodness will find expression in your lives."

The meeting at the Unique was crowded. The singing was led by Mr. H. H. Hare. Mr. Peters sang a solo. Rev. Mr. Matheson, who has charge of the Salvation Army group, as announced, gave a sketch of his life. The speaker spoke in a forceful manner and kept the attention of his audience throughout. Said he:—

I was born of Gaelic parents at River Dennis, Centre C. B. My parents were devout people and thoroughly believed in the Bible, and they taught me to reverence the Scriptures and the doctrine of the old Covenanters. In my boyhood I was inclined to recklessness of conduct and seemed to care nothing for anything pertaining to godliness. While yet in my teens I left home for the lumber woods of Pennsylvania. Careless and rough though I was, yet the profanity and general wickedness of the lumber regions was shocking to me, and at first I wondered that God did not send sudden destruction upon those wicked men. It seemed to me that God took no interest in the people of the lumber districts since He permitted to go unpunished the awful depravity prevailing, especially on the Sabbath. At last I succumbed to the influence of my surroundings and soon excelled in profanity and the other evil characteristics of the lumbermen. "My pugilistic ability won for me the reputation of a fighter and a bruiser, 'the bully of Potter County.' I became worse and worse, until finally one Sunday night I got into a bad fight with a frend of mine who was a Cape Bretoner, and he bit off a part of my ear. The fight took place at 6 o'clock Sunday evening and it was 8 o'clock the next evening before I reached a doctor. This filled me with dark thoughts and I thirsted for revenge. One thing led to another until I finally became the worst man in the camp. I had seen many killed, taken off in the midst of their sins, and had often wondered where they had gone. Often weary of life I had prayed God to take me out of it. I sometimes thought of suicide but was afraid of the future. I became a saloon keeper and used to sell whisky on Sundays, as well as every other day. All the saloons in the camp were habitual lawbreakers, made a practice of illegally selling liquor and were called "Pigs Ears." On account of my reputation as a fighter men would come for miles around to fight with me to prove who was the better man, and not under the Marquis if Queensbury rules either.

"One night there was to be a big dance, and all the saloon keepers expected to do a rushing business. They were in the habit of furnishing the officers of the law with all the liquor they wanted themselves and also paying them hush money. I had been selling liquor without a license, but had recently had a quarrel with the police over the amount of hush money. On the night of the dance an officer told me to close my saloon. I defied him, but the police secured help, surrounded my saloon and succeeded in arresting me. I was tried and sentenced to prison for three months, to pay $500 and the cost of prosecution. I found plenty of bad company in jail and bad literature, and nothing to help a man do better, but just the reverse. There were six churches in the town where the jail was, but nobody came to visit me. I have often thought what a great field that was for gospel work.

"When I came out of jail my business was gone, and I was down and out. I hadn't enough money to get a drink of whiskey. An evangelist was holding meetings in the place. I heard Evangelist Osborn tell the story of his own life, how he had been a drunkard, spent all, and his family were starving and utterly destitute. He told of his little girl sleeping in the woodbox and saying, "Papa, it is cold without any covers, and I can't stretch out because the box is too short." He would go out on the street and beg ten cents to get whiskey. Now he had a good home, with carpets on the floor, piano and a happy family. After hearing him I couldn't stay away from the meetings. I went night after night. One night I arose for prayers, thinking it wouldn't hurt me anyway.

"I was in the back seat among the rest of the mums, and people had told the Evangelist that these rowdies only came to break up the meeting, that they merely rose for fun when the invitation was given. On this account little attention was paid me at first. One night I went forward. I tried to pray but could not. Every word seemed like blasphemy, to call on God and to use the same words I had been accustomed to use profanely. Before I went forward the evangelist asked me to do so for my mother's sake. No other name would have taken me. After the meeting was over I arose and said to the minister: "I am on the road to hell. I cannot be saved." The minister smiled and said, "You are on the right road and will come out all right." I went to my room and walked the floor for hours. Finally becoming exhausted I fell asleep and a peace came over me. I had found Him by making a complete surrender. Upon waking the next morning my first thought was of my awful distress the night before. I instinctively turned to Gor for help and found that I could pray. But a voice kept saying to me, "You can't be saved, you have been too wicked. "Another voice seemed to say, "You are saved. Now will you go and tell others?" I said "Yes!" I went down to a barroom and found one of my old companions, put my arms around him and said, "I have found a friend and I want to introduce you to Him." I told him about Jesus and what he had done for me. At first they though I was delirious or crazy, but they soon found I was clothed in my right mind and was a changed man. I then started to hold meetings on the street, in small halls, saloons, everywhere I could find men to tell about my wonderful conversion. I was speaking in a saloon one day when a fellow started to disturb me, the saloon keeper pointed at him and said, "You stop; that is Billy Matheson, and as long as he is talking religion you let him alone." After a while I got preaching in the churches and have continued in the work to the present time. I prepared myself for evangelistic work by a course at the Interdenominational Bible Institute, Toronto."

Mr. Matheson said the worst episode in his life and which nearly cost him his liberty happened shortly before he became converted. Tom Kennedy, who was his friend and a native of Nova Scotia, a powerfully big fellow who stood 6 feet 4 inches, was arrested for keeping a "Pig's Ear," and for kicking and nearly killing a man. Kennedy defied the police but the officers said they would show the Down East fish eaters whether they could arrest them or not. The officers surrounded his house and succeeded in shackling him. Miss Plover to whom Kennedy was paying attention, supplied Matheson with a revolver and he put it in Kennedy's pocket. "The officers were some miles from the county seat and were compelled to stay at a farm house. We got the landlord to kick the officers out for a $5 bill, which he did. The next place they got into was old Plover's ranch. He also ran a 'pig's ear' and poolroom. We coaxed the officers to take the shackles off Kennedy and allow him to change his clothes. When his hands were loosened I winked at Kennedy and he struck the officer in the face. The officer got up and fired. Plover was standing behind the kitchen stove holding a baby. The shot passed through the baby's legs hitting Plover in the stomach and he died next day. One shot struck Kennedy's watch, smashing it. The shot glanced and struck the wall. We rescued Kennedy. Warrants were sworn out for the arrest of all concerned and at one time a reward was offered of $400 for our arrest. Miss Plover turned state evidence and told that I had put the revolver in Kennedy's pocket.

"Up to the time I was converted I went under the name of McIntosh. One night I was in Boston and the feeling came to me that if I didn't go and give myself up I would be damned. I went back and told them who I was and after a consultation with the prosecuting attorney of the state I was allowed to go."

DIFFERENT STORIES OF DISAPPEARANCE

Milford Farris Left City Last Tuesday—Wife Here to See Him—Said to be Another Woman in the Case.

Two widely different theories are advanced to explain the disappearance of Milford Farris, who left here on Tuesday last with a horse and pung belonging to Short's livery stables, and who has not since been heard from.

One is that he has been delayed by the bad condition of the roads; the other gets its origin in the attention he is said to have been paying to a woman in the city, and is that he has skipped out.

Relatives in the city profess no anxiety about his whereabouts, but the owners of the horse and rig have grown suspicious as to his course since he left the city.

Farris, who is a man about 45 years old, owns a farm on the Belleisle and left his wife and seven children there during the winter while he came to the city to work as a carpenter. On Tuesday he got a couple of days' holidays from A. D. Saunders, for whom he has been working, and going to Short's hired the rig and left the city, with the avowed intention of visiting his family. The same day his wife left Belleisle to come to the city to see him and so missed him. Nothing has been heard of Farris or the outfit since.

Mrs. Farris is at the home of Thos. Clark, 102 Sheriff street, whose wife is a sister of Farris, and with whom he has been staying while in the city.

In conversation with the Star today Mrs. Farris said that she was not at all anxious about her husband. She had learned that he left the city with Dennis Kennery of Chesley street and that they were going to visit the latter's relatives at Wickham and then her husband would go on to see her. She believed that they had been held up by the bad condition of the roads and would return as soon as possible. She did not think they were within reach of a telephone or they would have sent some word.

"Regarding the suggestion that her husband had some other motive for leaving the city she said that she could not believe such a thing and that she knew of nothing that would lead him to leave the city and not return. She did not believe in the idea that he had gone through the ice.

Mrs. and Mrs. Clark supported Mrs Farris' statements and denied knowledge of any circumstances which would lead to any suspicions regarding the actions of the missing man.

Mr. Short tells a different story, and, while unwilling to make any charges, said that he believed that Farris had parted company with the horse and that it would turn up later without him.

His reasons for believing in Farris' was that he gave his name and address correctly and that he paid a deposit for the hire of the horse. He also dickered about the price of the horse which he would hardly have done if he had not intended to return.

The suspicious circumstances arose from the stories that Farris since coming to this city has left his family without funds and has been spending his money on a married woman who also belongs up river, but who has not been living with her husband.

He told Mr. Short that he intended to take a couple of ladies with him and Mr. Short saw him pass with a gayly dressed woman in the sleigh a few minutes after he left the stable. Farris was also seen later driving down Pond street with two women in the sleigh.

Mr. Short had telephoned to Dr. McDonald at Chipman, who lives about two miles from the Farris home and the doctor had informed him that Farris had not turned up there.

The outfit which consists of a bay mare, a new set of harness, a new ash pung and three robes, is valued at not less than $250 and Mr. Short is naturally anxious to get it back. He was unwilling to do anything that might cause an unwarranted scandal and so delayed in informing the police of the occurance.

WILL NOT REPEAT THE UNITED SONG SERVICE

Crowds Too Large to be Accommodated—Different Arrangements May be Made—Suburbanites Disappointed.

Owing to the fact that it is impossible to accommodate even a fair proportion of those who wish to attend, it is understood that the united song service which has been held on the past two Saturday evenings will not be repeated. It is possible, however, that different arrangements will be made which will result in a more satisfactory condition of affairs. There were hundreds of people disappointed on Saturday night and the parents of the children who crowded a large part of the auditorium to the exclusion of adults, came in for some vigorous criticism.

About three hundred persons came in from points along the I. R. C. between St. John and Sussex with the intention of attending the service, but as the train was delayed the church was filled by the time they got there and not one of them gained admission to the building.

Board Will Accept Pres. Falconer's Advice—No Separate Schools for Orientals in B. C.

TORONTO, Ont., Feb. 21.—Following the advice given by Dr. Falconer, president of Toronto University, when he issued his annual report a month ago, the board of governors of the University, it is understood, is contemplating the appointment of a woman professor to the staff of the university with the title of dean. PARLIAMENT OPENS WITH POMP AND PAGEANTRY

LONDON, Feb. 21.—Parliament was opened formally this afternoon by King Edward, who was accompanied by Queen Alexandra, and is now fully organized and ready for the work of the session.

The state opening was marked by all the pomp and pageantry associated with these occasions since the accession of King Edward VII. The Royal progress through the troop lined streets from Buckingham Palace to the Palace at Westminister drew the usual huge crowds, but widespread as has always been the interest in these brilliant functions both among the public and those personally participating in them, today's ceremony had an attraction all its own.

Never allow the knobs of any of the stove or draft doors to become loose. They are all fastened with nuts inside, which often drop off and are lost.

CANADA WILL MAKE NO OVERTURES TO THE STATES

Not Worrying Over Maximum Tariff—Canada Will Make No Concessions

OTTAWA, ONT., Feb. 20—No official advices has yet reached the Dominion Government regarding the desire of the United States for negotiations to determine the tariff relations of Canada and the United States after March 31 in the light of the maximum clause of American tariff. Canada has made no representation of the reasons why the maximum should not be applied to Canada, first because it is believed by the Ottawa government that nothing in Canada's policy discriminates against the United States, and secondly because there seems to be no reason why it should be incumbnt upon Canada to volunteer what seems perfectly obvious reasons why the surtax of another country should not be applied. Sir Wilfrid Laurier has publicly stated that the Franco-Canadian treaty and the extension of its terms to most favored nations do not unduly discriminate against the United States.

If it be arranged for members of the American tariff board to visit Ottawa they will be afforded full and free opportunity for discussion of the question at issue. But in the German commercial agreement not yet concluded Canada has indicated its purpose not, at this time, further to extend the terms of the French treaty and the same answer may be given for the present, at least to any request of the United States for concessions of that character.

BIG TRACTION STRIKE CAUSE OF MANY RIOTS

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Feb. 20.—Rioting in every section of this city followed the attempt of the Philadelphia Rapid Transit Company to operate its lines here to-day. Passengers and crews were driven from the cars by infuriated mobs of strike sympathizers and in nearly a score of instances the abandoned cars were burned or otherwise destroyed. At nightfall every car was withdrawn from service.

Stern measures were taken by the police to quell the disorders and nearly five hundred persons were arrested charged with inciting to riot. Two women were hit by stray bullets, and many people were removed to hospital.

Mayor Reyburn to-night ordered Director of Police Clay to swear in 3,000 additional police and issued a proclamation enforcing the riot act.

The executive committee of the Central Labor Union, at a meeting this afternoon pledged both moral and financial support to the striking car men. They also decided to call a sympathetic strike of every union man in the city in case the authorities put in effect their threat to operate the cars with policemen and firemen.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Feb. 19.—Coming suddenly when least expected, a strike was declared against the Philadelphia Rapid Transit Company by the Amalgamated Association of Street and Electric Railway employees at one o'clock this afternoon, and tonight the police and firemen were busy handling turbulent crowds in several sections of the city. Two cars were burned; a score of cars were attacked forcing their crews to abandon them, and numerous arrests were made. Except in the central part of the city, street car service was almost at a standstill to-night. Cars running through the central sections were heavily protected.

The most serious disturbances were in Kensington, Philadelphia's great mill district in the north-eastern part of the city. Two cars in different parts of that district were attacked by strike sympathisers compelling the crews to abandon them. The cars were wrecked and were then set on fire. The fire department was summoned, but the cars were damaged beyond repair before the firemen arrived. Great crowds collected in the vicinity of the burned cars, and for a time it was feared that a riot would follow. The firemen, however, were ordered to turn their hose on the crowd and the mob quickly scattered.

Along Kensington Avenue, lumber and other obstructions were piled on the tracks. The usual big Saturday night crowd out for fun was in evidence, but the street was heavily policed, and no further general disorder occurred.

The traction company withdrew all its cars in that section to-night, the company declaring that it had men to run them but had no desire to cause trouble.

West Philadelphia, the southern section of the city, Germantown, and other parts of Philadelphia, also reported attacks on cars, forcing trolleymen and passengers to seek safety. Many persons were struck by missiles, but no one was seriously hurt.

To-day's strike is the second declared by the trolleymen within a year. The strike came so suddenly that thousands of persons were caught away from their homes and much inconvenience was caused. The leaders of the union claim that the trouble was started by the company, but the corporation retorts that the strike was a pre-arranged affair by the union.

Since the threatened strike of a month ago a committee has been endeavoring to reach an agreement to take the place of the one made after the strike of last summer which expired on June 1. The men in the proposed agreement asked for an increase of wages and among other things wanted to bind the company not to recognise any other union but the leaders charged that a rival organization known as the United Carmen's Association had been put in the field to defeat the efforts being made by the Amalgamated Association for better working conditions. The company declined to recognize the Amalgamated Association exclusively, but said that its men were free to belong to any union they wanted to.

The break in the meetings came on Tuesday, and last night and to-day about 200 were dismissed for the good of the service. This aroused the men's indignation, and they began turning in their cars about one o'clock. The news of the desertions quickly reached union headquarters with the result that a strike order was instantly issued.

The police and fire departments in anticipation of a strike had been on a "war footing" for a month, and were ready for business when the trouble came to-day. Mounted police were assembled in the city hall courtyard and squads of police and firemen were assigned to each of the 19 barns in the city. Policemen and firemen were also put on the cars to protect men who desired to remain at work.

Mayor Reyburn remained at city hall throughout the afternoon and evening. "My duty is to protect the interests of the public," he said, "and I will do that to the best of my ability."
