

GRAND LAND PROJECT.—We notice that a company are in progress for the organization of a company in London with a capital of £500,000, (over $1,500,000,) to be devoted to the purchase and settlement of lands in Illinois. The "Land Emigration Company" state that the additional purchase has been made of 250,000 acres of prairie land from the Illinois Central Land Company. "that when the sale is completed, the company will not be in any way connected with the Illinois Central Railroad, or its lands, but will hold the land by a direct tenure to the Canada Land Company, which was successfully established a large population in its lands, and proved an extremely profitable operation to its shareholders.—Railway.

OPER VIEW OF DOMESTIC DOGS.—The dogs family are a study. We cannot help commending their conduct with human beings—think them as such, in fact, unconsciously, if not them as well. With open doors and to go away if they please, they stay with us, and take what treatment we choose to give them—invited indoors, or left in the cold—fed what is left of our table, or perhaps care-forgotten—worked or played with—noticed for an expression of joy, or perhaps a back and neglected. They watch for us, and give us a bountiful welcome when we return after absence, are happy at being left stay without talking to, and are delighted to come with us, asking no questions, and following us please—faithful to death, we are sure, as if that were a matter of course! It is a world of more or less love to us, and a man throws away his friendship as a no dog.—Willis.

SMALL vs. LARGE FARMS.

Mr. Bessly in an agricultural lecture recently published in London, relates the following anecdote.

Mr. Bakewell was not only an eminent farmer and stock breeder, but a very shrewd man, and his neighbors were in the habit of resorting to him for counsel and advice. On one occasion an old friend went to pay him a visit for the purpose of explaining to him his position; and at the same time begged that he would reconside him what to do. He had lived all his life upon his own farm of 1,000 acres; he lived very well, but he had never saved a shilling. He had three daughters, and the eldest was about to be married; he highly approved of the match, but the intended husband expected some portion, and he had nothing to give him. Should he mortgage his estate or what should he do? Mr. Bakewell begged him to spend the night with him, and on the next morning to give him the result of his cogitations. Accordingly, the next morning when they met at breakfast, Bakewell said:

"I have made a very mind you ought to do; give your son-in-law one-fourth of the farm, keep the remaining three-fourths, do not part with any portion of your capital and stock, and work the remaining three-fourths with it. Do it better than you have hitherto done, and your income will be rather increased than diminished."

His friend followed his advice; but at the end of two or three years; another daughter was to be married, and the perplexed father again resorted to his friend Bakewell for advice, under this new difficulty. Bakewell coolly said he had watched his proceedings, and seen their results; he must do in this case as he had done before; he must give up another fourth of his farm, and keep the original capital and stock. The father seemed somewhat puzzled, but as he first experiment had succeeded, he determined to try it in this case also. Last of all the youngest daughter was to be married, and, in utter despair, the poor father paid another visit to Disley to explain his perplexity.

"Well," said Bakewell, tell me honestly whether your income has diminished by having reduced your farm by one half?

The father acknowledged he thought it had not.

"Then," said Bakewell, "you must give up another fourth of your farm, and keep the remaining 250 acres for yourself, and, to tell you the truth, you will thenceforth just such a farm as your stock, your capital and your head are fit for, and will be a better and happier man than ever."

Old Bakewell used to tell this story with great glee, and declared his land left as much stock and capital upon the 250 acres as he had ever had upon the 1,000, and, as he believed, made a better income out of it. This may be a somewhat exaggerated statement, but of this I am sure, at small well-cultivated farm will make a better return than a large, ill-cultivated one.

This may be true once—but the ordinary observation of every one will convince him that farmers, as a generalizing, try to cultivate too much land. Who is there that does not know of an instance where some men by well tilling small farms, are making more money with less capital and hard labour, than are their neighbors with twice their amount of land?

GREAT SALT LAKE.—The water marks show that the lake is now more remnant of what was one of the mighty after connections of the earth. Along the base of the mountain walls of the valley, if we may so term the limits of the basin, are distinct water-marks, the more elevated order being from 75 to 100 feet above the level of the valley. There is almost conclusive evidence that a great sea once existed in Utah Valley, whose breakers have left the marks of their power indented upon the rocky front of their mountain confines as a monument of their power. The whole face of the country appears to have passed through caloric influences of the intensest character. Enormous rocks fringed its margin, which are charred as black as ebony from the operation of heat, and their fragmentary condition bespeaks the mighty convulsions they have passed through. Near the lake's center there is quite a large island, upon which these volcanic indications are equally emphatic.

The heavy rain of Friday afternoon submerged all the low lands along the margin of the Kennebec, and other streams in the interior. Immense quantities of hay cut, but not stacked have floated away, or very much if not altogether damaged. The face of the valleys, on Saturday morning was dotted over for miles with miniature lakes, sparkling in the sunbeams. We never knew so much water to fall in one night, as came down in half a dozen hours on Friday. We have no doubt but that there has been a great deal of damage done by this freshet. Upwards of 40 rods of post road Lowry's Lake 4 miles from town appears to have been swept away. On Saturday morning the road was altogether impassable.—M. News.
