The Riel Question—Mackenzie Makes ALL CLAIMS WILL BE PAID IMMEDIATELY ON THE LOSS BEING ESTABLISHED up his Mind. SHIPPING NEWS. There was much excitement in St.

Andrews street to-day about the attempt of Mr. Thomas Taylor; a coloned barber who works at Mr. Wetzel's, Prince William street, to take his own life.

Taylor has been drinking considerably of late, or in his own words, has "not late, trousers and hat he had worn during the day, and the boots almost saturated with the rival's blood. The boots were compared with the bloody foot-prints that stained the ground from the spot of the murder to the street, and found to correspond exactly. Although there is a strong inclination to shield Corbett from the police in the vicinity, they feel certain of arresting him. (Special to Daily Nercs.) B., June 9, 734 moved that on the grounds of indictments for murder being issued and his being a fugitive from justice, Riel be expelled from the House.

Hon. Mr. Holton moved an amendment in effect that as the crime with which Riel was charged had arisen out of political matters, and as the committee were now examining into such matters the question of expulsion be postponed till the committee reported.

Mr. Mosseau moved a series of resolutions amending the amendment asking that the British Government be asked to grant a full amnesty to Riel, and all connected with the rebellion.

Hon. Mr. Holton and others said the resolutions were out of order, and the speaker was asked if such was not the case. A. D. E. DUNHAM, Architect, Office 106 Prince Wm, street, ap 11 51/2 (foot of) KING STREET, for the amendment postponing the question.

The Premier said he was prepared to stand by any speeches he had made-upon any subject. Mr. Bowell's real object was to make political capital against the Government, and only quoted his (Mackenzie's) former speeches in order to create a bad feeling in the House, yet he (Mackenzie) believed the case had been made out against Riel, and he must vote for his expulsion. He knew that his French friends thought Riel's offence was a political one. He saw no objection to granting an amnesty to all political offences in the North West, but he could not see that Riel's offence was a political one. It should be decided by courts. It had been complained that the Government had taken no action in expelling Riel, but Riel was a member when the late Government were in power and they took no steps to expel him. The question of amnesty should not interfere with the question of Riel's expulsion. He (Mackenzie) might have used too strong language formerly respecting Riel, but that should not be brought against him now. He would vote for Riel's expulsion and in future carry out a policy in the North West which would ensure harmony. CORN.
