An American writer says:—I have never known a house without a baby that grew along with all other houses. I never knew a baby that didn't pay its way in smiles and kisses to beguile the toll-woman and the weary.

No Gentlemen.

"Agh! Phew!"

Ho was very well dressed, red collar, Glossy hat, curly hair under it, white collar, new overcoat, neat little boots. And he stepped straight and quick, and gracefully, as if he were a dancer, and graciously, as if from your service—(for I did not see his face)—good looking and gentlemanly.

Still, it was easy to see that no woman would kiss him if she could help it; that he was not a thorough gentleman. If he had been, that filthy cloud would have driven round his head, dodging the fresh morning breeze on which it rode, straight into my face. I should have been saved some clogging and spitting, much disgust, and the trouble of uttering these remarks.

A gentleman? Very likely in your intentions. But this is not enough to intend to do good by car, dodging all every well, and so universal as they should be; but that alone does not mark the gentleman. He intends to do it, and does it, and does it in the right way, too. A gentleman, I might define, always does the right thing in the right way.

Wrong way! It shall not tell you how silly and sickly it is to smoke. But I will take the liberty of informing you that you should do it—if at all—in some smoking-room, bar-room, or other private or public beer-garden, and not out in God's sunlight, nor in the public's face—and hands, who want to sniff up the second-hand breath, mixed with cigar-smoke, and that kind of tobacco smoke, and pot-still, and that has a variety of useful materials for the inside of your body with it? Is doing the right thing to impose the use of your exertions upon a stranger in that manner?

Kiss him? Perhaps he has a wife. Poor thing! His own wife, it is supposed, must be kept from kissing by him. Suck! Suck! A suck of stale cigar-smoke, rather. Horrible!

Thomas Smallbad, Esquire, is so unfortunate as to have "a bad breath." It is almost "death at ten paces." One might as well stand and talk face to face with a pestilence. Perhaps he might excusably smoke cigars. So he might, provided, By hook or by crook, he might not blow it into people's faces in the public street even then. And as for you young man with your good health, good digestion, good teeth, you are inexorable. If you impregnate your person and clothes with the stink—no milder word will serve—you'll get those smoke-eyes as fast as you please, as long as you puff the same into the eyes and noses of others you are not a Gentleman.

The St. Hyacinthe Courier states that a tavern keeper Middlebridge, Eastern Townships, of the name of Langley, in a quarrel with his son, plunged a knife into the side of the latter. The wound proved mortal.

We learn that the Hon. Mr. Tilley, premier of New Brunswick, is expected to arrive in Quebec in a day or two. It is conjectured that the visit of Mr. Tilley bears some relation to the present aspect of the Intercolonial Railway question. Its reopening is, however, at present improbable.—Quebec Mercury.

THE DUKE'S OPINION.—The Duke of Cambridge, in a post-prandial speech in London recently, said that in the contest between armor-plated ships and rifled guns, the latter would win. The Duke's opinion, however, on anything but port wine, is said to be of little weight.

One of the essential ingredients in the manufacture of printer's ink is turpentine, and one of the causes of much of the late printing of newspapers within the last year has halted for a time. The Duke's opinion, however, on anything but port wine, is said to be of little weight.

The volunteer spirit kindled by the fears aroused by the "Trent" difficulty is after a short lull again beginning to glow. In almost every issue of the Official Gazette is announced the formation of new volunteer corps in both sections of the Province. These companies, in numerous cases, do not confine themselves to the regulation hours for practice, but devote much extra time to acquire skill in their military capacity.

The expedition repulsed at Vicksburg has gone up the Arkansas river, and is reported to have achieved an important success in the capture of Arkansas town.

The guerrillas are giving a great deal of trouble to Rosecrans, but he is nevertheless making big advances against them.

A federal movement on the Rappahannock is announced, probably as a cover for a movement elsewhere.

On the President hosting the United States flag in his garden, the occasion was marked by an ominous event. As the President pulled down the flag, the flag floated aloft, a branch of a tree caught the bunting and tore it, so that a number of the stars and stripes were detached and hung dangling beneath the rest of the flag. Every schoolboy will recall the equivalent omen when the standard of Charles I. was hoisted at Nottingham.

Mr. Joshua Norris, of Nassagaweya, holds his hand out by a circular saw some days ago.

Complaints are made of the prevalence of small pox in Port Hope, Millbrook and other places east.

The body of a newly-born infant, wrapped in a white cloth and a small piece of blanket, had been found at the door of Mrs. Dillon's house, George St., Hamilton.
