QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS. Miscellaneous.

MARE INJURED AT RAILWAY CROSSING.

I had a mare, with a colt five weeks old, pasturing beyond the railroad in the pasture field with the cows, and we use the side-road for a lane, and the boys were driving her and her colt up to the barn with the cows, and she started to cross the cattle-guards, and got her foot fast and broke her leg. She had to be killed. The guards are made of narrow boards, put in on the slant. Can I charge the company damages for my loss? She was about fifteen years old, and worth about $100. The colt I am raising by hand, and will not be nearly as good as raised on the mare.

E. H.

Ans.—The railway company cannot be held responsible for your loss.

CATTLE CHEW BONES.

Have a lot of cattle on a first-class pasture, and a stream running through it. Some bones are lying on the ground, which they pick up and commence to chew. There is no limestone here, just granite. Would you kindly say in your next issue if the land needs anything to stop their liking for bones? They have lots of salt.

A. W.

Ans.—This depraved appetite is supposed to be due to a lack of phosphates in the system, or some essential constituent in the feed. An application of bone meal or of acid phosphate to the land which grows the feed will sometimes prove beneficial. A balanced ration containing some bran and clover hay sometimes cures the habit. And mixing the salt with sifted hardwood ashes has been recommended as a means of satisfying the abnormal appetite.

CELLAR WALL AND CEMENT BLOCKS.

1. What thickness of wall and what proportion of gravel, sand and cement would you recommend for the cellar of a concrete-block house, 24x28x16 feet high; blocks 10 inches thick?

2. Would 1 to 5 of very coarse sand be suitable proportion for the blocks?

3. What is difference between lime, rock cement, and Portland cement? H. S.

Ans.—1. Twelve inches would be plenty thick enough, if the wall is properly constructed. Ten inches would suffice, so far as strength is concerned, but the thicker the wall, the better it will resist the frost. As to the proportions of cement, gravel and sand, there is no hard-and-fast rule. It varies with the brand of cement, character of sand and gravel, and many other factors. Better to follow the instructions of the cement manufacturer. We suggest the following, however: One part first-class Portland cement, three parts clean, sharp sand, and 8 parts of clean, coarse gravel; or, one part of cement to ten parts clean, sharp gravel.

2. One part first-class Portland cement to five of clean, coarse sand should make a strong block.

3. See letter by Prof. R. Harcourt, in "Farm" department.

CARE OF BROOD SOWS.

Could you give me any information regarding how to feed brood sows which are now within four weeks of farrowing? I intend showing these sows. They are very fleshy, and this is their first litter. They have been out on grass all summer, and have been fed half bran, other half equal parts wheat and rye; nearly all they would eat, twice daily. Some advocate giving a dose of salts just before farrowing to cool the blood and prevent milk fever. What do you think about this? Also let me know how to feed after farrowing to get best results at fairs. Would these sows, being fleshy, be in any danger in farrowing? J. C.

Ans.—The treatment you are giving these sows, as far as exercise and pasture is considered, is ideal. The only danger is that the ration may be a little too strong. A little oat chop, with less of the wheat and rye, would be an improvement. We would not advise dosing, as the grass and bran should be sufficient to keep the bowels relaxed, and dosing is dangerous in the case of sows in their condition. There is very little danger of difficulty in farrowing in the case of sows in high flesh when they have exercise and are grazing.
