NOVEMBER.—How to cook a beef steak becomes a very grave question to all of us who have eaten so many tough and tender ones. We read of one cooked thus: He took the long-handled frying pan from its nail and putting it on the stove heated it quite hot. He took out the pieces of steak previously pounded, but did not put a particle of butter in the frying pan, and did not salt his steak. He cooked the steak to merely glaze over, and then turned it quickly to the other side—turning it over several times until it was done. Four minutes were not employed in the operation, but I think I never ate a juicier piece of steak. When it was done, it was laid on a plate previously warmed, and was buttered and salted, and set a moment in the hot oven. Allowing the steak just to heat on each side helped to retain all its juices, while the salt drew them out.
