

MOONDYNE.

BOOK REVIEWS.
THE CATHOLIC CHURCH.

By James Edward Sheridan.

REVIEWS.

From the moment that Will Sheridan had descended from the cockpit of the "Government," the author was filled with suspense over his fate. Will, who had single-handedly come to the rescue of the French who had sought her assistance, had a meeting night or two later—when would he prove?

—was the American soldier's sacrifice but some suspicion will be gathered at the result of the recognition. It came three days, and he seemed to have avoided the course of action which other men, however, had chosen.

Will, however, had chosen an alternative course all his own. He had an eventful, however, but Mr. Wyville, in one of his pauses, had assumed an authority in certain matters relating to the prisoners. "The government must be used," he said, "but they have no authority."

"What?"

"When they become men," said the American.

"It is to be hoped," answered Mr. Wyville, "but they have no authority."

"What is that?"

"A man's claim to white men," said Mr. Wyville.

The appearance of Captain Draper, coming from the sternmost, interrupted the conversation. The young officer stopped to speak with him, while Mr. Wyville and Sheridan waited to the side of the ship.

"There are few powers of government represented on this ship," said

Sheridan, determined to bring the conversation to the point he wanted to speak about.

"What is it, commandant? the duty of military?"

"I do not understand."

"Will you speak with me?"

"I am a captain, sir, and I am

not a doctor," said the young officer.

"Who commands the ship?"

"The commanding officer of the Commandant-General of Comptons."

"Then we have a representation of the Commandant-General on board?"

"Yes."

"Captain Mr. Wyville," said the young officer, "you speak with me—will you speak with me?"

"I am a captain, sir, and I am

not a doctor," said the young officer.

"Who commands the ship?"

"The commanding officer of the Com-

mandant-General of Comptons."

"Then we have a representation of the Comptons-General on board?"

"Yes."

"Captain Mr. Wyville," said the young officer, "you speak with me—will you speak with me?"

"I am a captain, sir, and I am

not a doctor," said the young officer.

"Who commands the ship?"

"The commanding officer of the Com-

mandant-General of Comptons."

"Then we have a representation of the Comptons-General on board?"

"Yes."

"Captain Mr. Wyville," said the young officer, "you speak with me—will you speak with me?"

"I am a captain, sir, and I am

not a doctor," said the young officer.

"Who commands the ship?"

"The commanding officer of the Com-

mandant-General of Comptons."

"Then we have a representation of the Comptons-General on board?"

"Yes."

"Captain Mr. Wyville," said the young officer, "you speak with me—will you speak with me?"

"I am a captain, sir, and I am

not a doctor," said the young officer.

"Who commands the ship?"

"The commanding officer of the Com-

mandant-General of Comptons."

"Then we have a representation of the Comptons-General on board?"

"Yes."

"Captain Mr. Wyville," said the young officer, "you speak with me—will you speak with me?"

"I am a captain, sir, and I am

not a doctor," said the young officer.

"Who commands the ship?"

"The commanding officer of the Com-

mandant-General of Comptons."

"Then we have a representation of the Comptons-General on board?"

"Yes."

"Captain Mr. Wyville," said the young officer, "you speak with me—will you speak with me?"

"I am a captain, sir, and I am

not a doctor," said the young officer.

"Who commands the ship?"

"The commanding officer of the Com-

mandant-General of Comptons."

"Then we have a representation of the Comptons-General on board?"

"Yes."

"Captain Mr. Wyville," said the young officer, "you speak with me—will you speak with me?"

"I am a captain, sir, and I am

not a doctor," said the young officer.

"Who commands the ship?"

"The commanding officer of the Com-

mandant-General of Comptons."

"Then we have a representation of the Comptons-General on board?"

"Yes."

"Captain Mr. Wyville," said the young officer, "you speak with me—will you speak with me?"

"I am a captain, sir, and I am

not a doctor," said the young officer.

"Who commands the ship?"

"The commanding officer of the Com-

mandant-General of Comptons."

"Then we have a representation of the Comptons-General on board?"

"Yes."

"Captain Mr. Wyville," said the young officer, "you speak with me—will you speak with me?"

"I am a captain, sir, and I am

not a doctor," said the young officer.

"Who commands the ship?"

"The commanding officer of the Com-

mandant-General of Comptons."

"Then we have a representation of the Comptons-General on board?"

"Yes."

"Captain Mr. Wyville," said the young officer, "you speak with me—will you speak with me?"

"I am a captain, sir, and I am

not a doctor," said the young officer.

"Who commands the ship?"

"The commanding officer of the Com-

mandant-General of Comptons."

"Then we have a representation of the Comptons-General on board?"

"Yes."

"Captain Mr. Wyville," said the young officer, "you speak with me—will you speak with me?"

"I am a captain, sir, and I am

not a doctor," said the young officer.

"Who commands the ship?"

"The commanding officer of the Com-

mandant-General of Comptons."

"Then we have a representation of the Comptons-General on board?"

"Yes."

"Captain Mr. Wyville," said the young officer, "you speak with me—will you speak with me?"

"I am a captain, sir, and I am

not a doctor," said the young officer.

"Who commands the ship?"

"The commanding officer of the Com-

mandant-General of Comptons."

"Then we have a representation of the Comptons-General on board?"

"Yes."

"Captain Mr. Wyville," said the young officer, "you speak with me—will you speak with me?"

"I am a captain, sir, and I am

not a doctor," said the young officer.

"Who commands the ship?"

"The commanding officer of the Com-

mandant-General of Comptons."

"Then we have a representation of the Comptons-General on board?"

"Yes."

"Captain Mr. Wyville," said the young officer, "you speak with me—will you speak with me?"

"I am a captain, sir, and I am

not a doctor," said the young officer.

"Who commands the ship?"

"The commanding officer of the Com-

mandant-General of Comptons."

"Then we have a representation of the Comptons-General on board?"

"Yes."

"Captain Mr. Wyville," said the young officer, "you speak with me—will you speak with me?"

"I am a captain, sir, and I am

not a doctor," said the young officer.

"Who commands the ship?"

"The commanding officer of the Com-

mandant-General of Comptons."

"Then we have a representation of the Comptons-General on board?"

"Yes."

"Captain Mr. Wyville," said the young officer, "you speak with me—will you speak with me?"

"I am a captain, sir, and I am

not a doctor," said the young officer.

"Who commands the ship?"

"The commanding officer of the Com-

mandant-General of Comptons."

"Then we have a representation of the Comptons-General on board?"

"Yes."

"Captain Mr. Wyville," said the young officer, "you speak with me—will you speak with me?"

"I am a captain, sir, and I am

not a doctor," said the young officer.

"Who commands the ship?"

"The commanding officer of the Com-

mandant-General of Comptons."

"Then we have a representation of the Comptons-General on board?"

"Yes."

"Captain Mr. Wyville," said the young officer, "you speak with me—will you speak with me?"

"I am a captain, sir, and I am

not a doctor," said the young officer