Child Welfare Today is Very Badly Neglected

Need of Intelligent Direction of Vast Stream of Voluntary War Effort in England

London, Jan. 3—The need of in-ielligent direction of the vast stream of voluntary war effort in England is vividly illustrated by the plight which the London educational uthority finds itself in connection with its child welfare work, which haps father did not interfere much, now more necessary than ever and which is being neglected because of the more attractive calls on the voluntary workers for service nore directly connected with the war. A great campaign has been begun by the education authority to oring in new workers and to conince those who have left that there can be no more important ork than that of safe-guarding the health and morals of the soldiers and the mothers of the coming gen-

How serious the situation has become is proved by the fact that instead of the normal number of 000 members in the "care" committees in London there are now ess than 1.000 and many of these re unable for one reason or another o devote as much time as in des-

Mere Book Education England realized some years ago that mere book education was very little use to children who were un-derfed or suffering from disease. The first step taken was the appointment of school medical officers whose duty it is to examine every child at least three times duing the period of his attendance at

There is a consequent lack of parental discipline. In the old days perbut he was always in the background and mother held him in reserve as a terrible threat to enforce her com mands. Now the children know that the father and his leather belt are at the front and that "the front" is a long way from home. Then there are all sorts of interesting things to be seen in the streets and in the picture palaces and the result is that the children stay out late and get into trouble. They fall into the hands of the police and the solemn old magistrates talk gravely about 'juvenile crime,' when the children of the poor are charged with committing acts in the street, which if committed by the magistrate's own boys in the playing fields would be laughed at as examples of ones high spirits. The juvenile care committees are needed to organize amusements which will keep the children out of mischief, to instill into them a sense of discipline and if they do fare committee has now been in existence for 17 years. It was established by the old London school and see that the punishment is not and see that the punishment is not oard and when the County Council entirely out of proportion to the

FRENCH MAYOR BINDS WOUNDS OF AN INJURED GERMAN IN FARMHOUSE COURTYARD

The photograph shows a French mayor binding up the wounds of a Germ an soldier who has been hit by a shell. The incident took place in the court house of a farmhouse at St. Elienne au Temple, France. Several Fren ch women are interested spectators. The fact that the German is wounded entirely changes his status in the eyes of the French spectators and they treat him not as an enemy but as one of them. They are just as careful to see that his life is saved as if he were one of their own boys.
