Quick Lunch Counter Succeeds Hotel Bar

Big Western Houses Solve Problem of Decreased Revenue in Loss of Liquor Licenses; Predict Great Results in the Future

Theodore M. Knappen, a traveling staff correspondent of the New York Tribune, writes to that paper under a Minneapolis date line as follows:

When one returns from a considerable stay in the dry states to one that is still in the wet column he is struck by some very sharp contrasts. The gay night life in the larger cities of the west zone as compared with the downtown quiet of the dry zone cities is very noticeable. Let New Yorkers be warned.

When prohibition comes to Gotham the glory of Broadway will depart. When there are no drinks early bed-going is popular. People do not stay up all night to haunt restaurants and cabarets when there are no stimulating accompaniments. Dinner parties in hotels and restaurants do not flourish. The formal banquet, deprived of its main antidote for the addresses, no longer flourishes.

Not long since I was in one of the dining rooms of the Hotel Albany in Denver. A few years ago it was a scene of life and gaiety and exuberant spirits from 7 to the evening until 11 in the morning. The evening I was there, there were only a few diners at 9, and the after-theatre crowd amounted to next to nothing. A few idle waiters waited disconsolately for the diners they knew would not come. One of them assured me that he had no hope that that night would ever come back. He had a conviction that if the subject were submitted to vote the people would favor the return of wine and beer, but he saw small chance of such a submission. He was inclined to view the adversity of dryness as a sort of merited punishment for the excesses of the old regime. If there had not been the decision of gayety into disoluteness there would not have been a popular demand for the abolition of the whole business.

Big Hotels are Hard Hit
Prohibition is a serious business for the big hotels. In the old days the bar and the liquor trade supplied the profits of many of the larger hotels and restaurants. The tremendous increase in the Western tourist traffic since the war began has made it possible for many hotels to make their situation without resorting to the cultivation of sources of revenue to take the place of the lost ones. Others had so large a share of their income dependent on the bar and its auxiliaries that even with a 100 per cent. room record they have found that they must find additional income or get out of business.

Take the famous Hotel Davenport, of Spokane, for instance. This is one of the great hotels of America, though it is located in a city of not more than 100,000. It compares favorably in size, appointments, equipment and service with the best New York hotels. Its bar and liquor business raised the hotel's black balance on the hotel's books. All of the managers of the big hotels of America, including many in New York, have kept an eye on the Davenport to see how it met the prohibition problem, with a view to being prepared themselves for the dry overhead, which is coming, sooner or later.

Taking the line of least resistance Mr. Davenport tried the soft drink experiment at first, but soon came to the conclusion that was a waste of time and money to push it hard—there was not enough profit. His next idea was to make his dining rooms yield additional revenue. To replace the enormous profits of liquor with only about 6 per cent "overhead," with the small profits of the restaurants, with a 40 per cent "overhead," meant that there must be an almost impossible increase in the volume of the restaurant business. He observed that a large proportion of his room guests passed by his luxurious and high-priced dining rooms and took most of their meals at moderate priced outside restaurants. He argued that if the outsiders could make money providing meals for these economical persons, he could.

Quick Lunch Counter
So right in the midst of his palatial hotel he installed a quick lunch counter and a quick table service restaurant. They were different from ordinary eating places. Better furniture and equipment, finer china-ware, pretty and uniquely uniformed waitresses gave them a distinctive air. Hotel guests soon found that their own roof cost no more than the indifferent service and food of the outside restaurants. Having held his own, people in this way, Mr. Davenport looked around for means of getting some of the city trade that his superior high priced restaurant and dining rooms had not already have. A 35 cent noon-day lunch for men only in the Peacock Room solved this problem. Here the economical Spokane business man who has time to spare for a course luncheon in luxurious and dignified surroundings can drop in with his fellows, smoke, talk business and be at ease.

To attract the ladies of the city, Mr. Davenport turned part of the elaborate bar-room into the "Orange Room," with moderate prices, dainty menus and exceptional service, soon had all the ladies of Spokane figuring out pretexes for staying down town over the lunch hour or to drop in for a cup of afternoon tea.

The next step was to add a delicatessen, so that after dining at the Davenport patrons might take home with them the "makings" of the next meal.

Evolved from the idea of moderate price restaurants was that of rooms at low rates. At the Davenport you can have a room that is the equal of the Baltimore best at half the Baltimore price, or a smaller and plainer one for a quarter of that amount.

Mr. Davenport was naturally opposed to prohibition, but having made up his mind that the people wanted it, he, like a wise boniface, decided to please the public. Hence every attempt at the illicit introduction of liquor into the hotel has been sternly suppressed.

Another avenue of additional patronage has been opened up by "playing up" the hotel as a sort of community social club and headquarters. With the highest social standards rigidly maintained, and with no demoralizing strong drink, Spokane's "best people" see no harm in public dancing in the Davenport's restaurants.

The process of restoring the former volume of business by introducing substitute revenue producers is a slow one, but it is gaining momentum, and Mr. Davenport says that within a few years the hotel profits will be as large as ever.

The Hotel Portland at Portland, has rented its bar-room to a Christian Science church. If you inquire sedulously and discreetly enough, you may, perhaps in consideration of $5 a quart, be permitted to tap the inner tube of a spare tire of an automobile that has just arrived from Montana. Or you may be supplied through the system of secret lockers. The amount of liquor thus introduced is, however comparatively negligible, and there are no visible evidences of it. The saloons are gone and what remains are the slums and recognized social vice. A dry town is a clean town. "Boot-legging" flourishes, of course.

PROMISE FOR FUTURE GOOD

With Increase in Canada's Prestige as a Belligerent, War Business Booms.

Ottawa, Oct. 20.—Announcement that the Imperial Munitions Board will spend money liberally in Canada for the winter on munitions contracts is welcomed here as an assurance of industrial prosperity during the winter months. It also means that the total amount spent on munitions in Canada to the end of the year will be an imposing sum, just how large it is difficult to estimate at the moment.

Consideration of this question brings up the point that Canada has been unusually fortunate in the matter of obtaining contracts for war material, all kinds of which have been exported to Europe since war began. One of the features of Canada's participation in the war has been the prosperous business it has brought to Canada.

The adoption by Canada of the Military Service Act has vastly increased the national prestige as a belligerent on the side of the Allies and has assured the country of continued prosperity through war activity.

LIBERTY LOAN
