The Sad Case of Dr. Stebbins, of the Boston City Hospital, who died recently from diphtheria, contracted while pursuing his professional duties, as admitting physician to the hospital, may have brought to the minds of many the often-repeated inquiry as to the manner in which immunity from contagion is secured by doctors, nurses and others, whose business brings them so often in direct contact with infectious diseases.

HOW TO ESCAPE CONTAGION.

Keep Up Your Vitality and Court Hygienic Conditions.

The sad case of Dr. Stebbins, of the Boston City Hospital, who died recently from diphtheria, contracted while pursuing his professional duties, as admitting physician to the hospital, may have brought to the minds of many the often-repeated inquiry as to the manner in which immunity from contagion is secured by doctors, nurses and others, whose business brings them so often in direct contact with infectious diseases.

The answer must be somewhat general, as well as a repetition of what has many times been given, but it is not the less worth heeding on that account.

One of the greatest safeguards against infection are a strong vitality and carefully selected hygienic surroundings.

The strength of disease lies in taking its victim off his guard. In fact its attacks are mostly made in ambush, as it were, incidentally and against the weakest spot in the armor of the victim.

Let a person, in no matter how good health, contract a slight cold or get over-fatigued, and immediately his very strength becomes a source of weakness.

It is easy to see that even a physician, overtaxed with work and suffering somewhat from an occasional neglect of hygienic laws, may finally succumb to the disease amid which he lingers.—Youth's Companion.

LAUGH AND LEARN.

To H. R. H. the Princess of Wales.

(Duchess of Cornwall at Fredensborg.) Beautiful Dane, with the fair and face, And the calm grand eyes we so love to see;

They say thou hast felt thy first-born's death As mothers can only who love like thee; That the roses have left thy cheeks, and thou Hast pined for the froids and Norway's sea.

In the wonderful light of the storm-clad hills, Where ever lies still the virgin snow, Thou hast pined with thy fair daughters' tears, Seeking for peace and for health I trow.

We follow thy footsteps with loving gaze; We sorrow with thee, be sure of this; And we watch for the sun's bright rays To brighten thy path. Ah! these we miss.

In thine own home thou art now at rest With those thou lovest—we leave thee there; Far from the maddening crowd; 'tis best That thou should'st be free from carking care.

But yet remember thy Island home, This people that hold thee, ah! so dear, And come back soon. May the Peace of God Rest upon thee, thy life to cheer.

"Sea King's Daughter from over the sea." Our Latest greeting in years long past, "We are all of us Danes in our welcome to thee, And all of us loyal while life shall last.

Heaven send thee safe to our shores again— Our Latest greeting in years long past, And joy come to thee, and never pain; Be happy, sweet Princess, for ever and aye.

UNDERWEAR SALE.

Christmas, with all that word implies of enjoyment or disappointment, is gone and we are now entering on a new year with all its possibilities. We think it's possible to keep you interested in our big new store from now till the little folks begin to look for Santa again, and with that end in view we are selling Ladies' White Underwear, Corsets, Closures, Linens, etc., during this month or as long as

A MANUFACTURER'S STOCK of Ladies' Nightgowns, Chemises, Drawers, Skirts and Lawn Aprons will last. We bought it with a great big discount off the regular price and we are selling them at less than we could buy the same goods in the usual way or you could make them up for.

OUR READY CASH SECURED this lot and there is not one of them that was not intended to sell for a third more than the figures quoted. So when you start to make up your season's stock. But if you make up your mind to have your own made up we want you to see our White Cotton Department for

BEST ENGLISH LONG CLOTH, BEST AMERICAN AND CANADIAN COTTONS There is no economy in buying poor Cottons. Get good Cottons when you get a chance to get them cheap. The same rule applies to Factory Cottons, too. Also the balance of ANOTHER MANUFACTURER'S STOCK of Table Linens, Towels and Towelings that were not cleared out before Christmas; must be cleared out now as our buyers have gone to the linen making centres, and we must make room for their purchases; therefore, the stock on hand will have to mark time with the other bargains offered all over the store.

OUR DRESS GOODS ARE NOT LIMITED, except by your wants. The prices are away down, in some cases below the half. If you don't live in Hamilton and can't see us in our new store write for samples or information. You will get either by return mail and don't delay your order, as it causes considerable trouble and disappointment when what you order has been sold out in the meantime. If your order is $5 we will deliver it free.
