MEXICO CITY, Feb. 21.
The fate of Madero and Jose Pino Suarez, the deposed President and ex-President of Mexico, is taking second place in public interest to the question of the extent in which Mexico is still in revolution. There is still cause for anxiety. The most important problem now before Mexico is to solve the intentions of the rebels. In view of General Huerta's personal assurance to Senor Madero that her husband will not be killed, and the fact that his life was not taken during the excitement attending his downfall, it is believed that some more humane measure will be devised for his elimination from public life. The Cabinet and Congress, which meets to-day, will probably discuss the matter at once.
