

"Shoes That Fit Best Wear The Longest."

It is a fact. If a shoe hurts, the foot flinches and some other part of the shoe suffers.

DOROTHY DODD SHOES, fitted as we fit them, will wear as long as any reasonable person may expect; and they will always look as they did the first day you put them on.

What You Do If You Live in the Country.

There is one sure thing about living in the country—it certainly teaches you to stand on your own feet. The city is, par excellence, the place of specialists. When anything goes wrong in any department of the household, if you live in the city, you call in a specialist; if you live in the country, you fix it yourself.

What You Do If You Live in the Country.

Suppose, however, you live in the country. The nearest plumber has his headquarters in B. eleven miles away. Very likely he is eleven miles from the other side of B. on all-day job, and your call for help, when the water persists in acting queerly, would only bring that interesting information from his wife. So what do you do? Why the only thing that is left to do is to get acquainted with the mystery of the ball and socket. You finally manage to work out the problem and fix what's wrong, and ever after you remain on friendly, almost patronizing terms with your plumbing. I have used plumbing as a symbol of the way the country dweller has to stand on his feet because it represents my own experience.

Plumbing Was One of the Seven Deadly Mysteries to Me.

For the first thirty years of my life I lived in the city within four blocks of the plumber and thought plumbing one of the seven deadly mysteries of the world. Then I acquired a summer residence in the country and learned to use my wits.

Of course, the plumber is only one of the many specialists who live right around the corner in the city. Next door to him is the doctor, on the other side, the carpenter, across the street, the furnace man, the locksmith, etc. They are all ready and eager to keep the city dweller from trying to use his intelligence in any but his own specialty. Whereas, in the country, it's either learn to use your wits or suffer for the lack of them. Truly, to pervert an old proverb, "Distance is the mother of invention."

Gamblers All!

A certain London magistrate gave it as his opinion that it would be quite impossible for the police to suppress gambling among Chinamen in the East End. Gambling is almost a national passion with a Chinaman; he will gladly gamble on anything and everything.

During recent years there has been a marked increase in gambling in this country, and it is really astonishing what some people will gamble on.

A game of chance which is popular in a number of South Coast holiday resorts is played as follows: Each player—there may be any number—puts down a lump of sugar and a shilling in front of him. The one on whose sugar the first fly settles secures the stakes. Many players have been known to win as much as £5 in a single day.

In the Rhondda mining districts it is no uncommon sight to see a group of men and youths standing at a street corner watching for the number of the first tramcar on which there was a corner watching for the number of the hymns given out at religious services not infrequently form the subject of bets.

First Things First.

The monotony of a long ocean voyage is frequently relieved by inventing new sweepstakes. On a certain Cape liner the male passengers got up a "sweep" on the total ages of all the women passengers on board. Each had to guess their individual ages, and then add up the total. When completed these lists were handed to the ship's purser, who was able to check them with the official age declarations given him by each passenger at the commencement of the voyage.

Nearly all varieties of gambling are more or less prevalent in Australia.

and New Zealand; horses acting being the most popular. When "plotting out" a new town, it is not unusual for the race-track to be laid out first, even before the sites for the church and school have been decided upon.

Many men working on the "out-back" sheep station of Australia and New Zealand will frequently state the entire proceeds of twelve months' hard toil on the result of some local horse-race. This reckless speculation is often undertaken each year with amazing regularity.

BEAUTIFYING HANDS AND ELBOWS.

There never was a human elbow that did not need beautifying. We should be grateful that our elbows are hitched to us in such a manner that we cannot see them well; it would be too discouraging.

Just get a pot of cold cream, a shaker full of almond meal, some hot Turkish towels and considerable elbow grease.

We begin by giving the hands and arms a good scrubbing with warm water, pure white soap and a nail brush, the laundering process to extend to the tops of the arms. A gentle drying, if you please with a bit of soft linen. Be thorough with the drying.

We begin now the massage with cold cream. Creme marquee is usually well adapted to hand and arm massage because it is a thin, smooth cream and is readily eaten up by the skin.

Each finger is massaged separately, the cream frictioned in to the last possible minute. See that the cuticle about the nails is specially treated. Dig into the knuckles where the household dust loves to gather, seeking secure crevices and hiding spots. Follow with a thorough massage of the backs of the hands and the palms. Very firm the pressure, you can't hurt your hands and arms with too much rubbing, and the stimulation will help forward the good results that are on the way.

Place the right hand like a bracket around the left arm. Hold it firm and turn the arm forward and back. Begin at the wrist and work up towards the top of the arm. Follow with long, firm strokes from elbow to hand. Work in the sweet-scented emollient. Your flesh will eat it eagerly. It will be as if the cells hungered for the soothing oils and the caressing treatment. You can spend fifteen or twenty minutes with the manipulation, and they will be moments well invested. Your arms and hands will feel younger and their soft surface will be ample reward for your trouble.

Over the cold-creamed surface sprinkle almond meal. This will combine with the cream that remains and will form a paste. Pat in well with flattened palms. Have your best household aid wring big Turkish towels out of very hot water and wrap about the arms. The heat will drive in the oils still deeper. Continue with the hot applications as long as you have time to play that way. No fewer than three towels on each arm anyway. More are better.

A rinsing bath of clear water with a little benzoin added will remove the paste. Don't use soap as that is drying and will detract from the good results of the oily treatment. Finish up with a massage with a Turkish towel and a light palm massage with talcum powder. This arm treatment has such a softening effect upon the finger nails and cuticle about the nails that a manicure should rightly follow.

BILL HOHENZOLLERN.

If he had loved the green of trees, The drowsy hum of summer bees, If friends had dared to call him Bill, He might have been a monarch still. If he had ever stopped to play With children at the close of day, Or ridden them upon his knee, He might not now an outcast be.

If he had ever turned aside And dropped his dignity and pride, Forgetting that he was a king, To do a little neighboring With humble men who crossed his way, If he had ever spent one day In comradeship—he might not now Have hatred written on his brow.

Had he loved skies and running brooks, And tangled woods and fishing nooks, And learned to call the birds by name, And fed them crumbs as they grew tame, Or had he ever left his throne To talk with men, he might have known Some secrets of the human heart. And better played the monarch's part.

If home had ever meant to him More than a castle, cold and grim; If he had tended it with care, Planted the roses blooming there; Had learned to laugh and romp and sing, Been more a man and less a king, He might not now in Holland wait The dreadful verdict of his fate.

That man who worships power alone Shall suddenly be overthrown: Who turns away from men and God, Shall fall at last beneath the rod. He that would seek for world success Must tread the ways of humbleness And find in the gentle ways and pure The royalty that can endure.

THE CALLING VOICE.

WALT MASON

"Somewhere a voice is calling." I hear the plaintive lay, when evening shades are falling, and dusk is dim and gray; it's sung by youth and maiden, who lightly bear their years, who are not heavy laden, and worn by toil and tears. I see my daughter dolling herself in costly frills; somewhere a voice is calling on me to pay the bills; somewhere a voice is saying, "Your stand-offs gone to seed; come hither and be paying the money that we need." My folks are always falling for rugs and druggets nice; somewhere a voice is calling on me to raise the price. I sit and brood and ponder beneath my fig and vine, and long to be up yonder where all the planets shine. For life is sad and bitter, a long and weary road, and one who's not a quitter must always bear a load. There is no time for stalling, no pause for set or fun; somewhere a voice is calling for mon and still more mon. The good sport bears his burden, and hopes that when he dies he will receive as geridon a free pass to the skies. Where silver streams are bawling by Ede's verdant hills, he'll hear no voices calling on him to pay the bills.

Mother! Is Child's Stomach Sour, Sick?

If tongue is coated or if cross, feverish, constipated give California Syrup of Figs.

Don't scold your fretful, peevish child. See if tongue is coated; this is a sure sign its little stomach, liver and bowels are clogged with sour waste.

When listless, pale, feverish, full of cold, breath bad, throat sore, doesn't eat, sleep or act naturally, has stomach-ache, indigestion, diarrhoea, give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," and in a few hours all the food passes out of the bowels and you have a well and playful child again. Children love this harmless "fruit-laxative," and mothers can rest easy after giving it, because it never fails to make their little "insides" clean and sweet.

Keep it handy, Mother! A little given to-day saves a sick child to-morrow, but get the genuine. Ask your druggist for a bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which has directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly on the bottle. Remember there are counterfeits sold here, so "carefully look and see that it is made by the California Fig Syrup Company." Don't be fooled!
