

ROYAL YEAST CAKES

Canadian Made

A fresh, rosy complexion indicates perfect health. To secure this in most cases all that is necessary is to take one to three Royal Yeast Cakes a day for a few weeks.

Royal Yeast is a food. It supplies the water soluble vitamins which the diet may lack. Scientists tell us that this vitamin is essential to good health. Royal Yeast is highly beneficial in many cases in which the system seems to be run down. The yeast cakes simply add to the diet. It is a food - not a medicine.

Dissolve a Royal Yeast Cake in fruit juices or mix it with cereal and milk, and take it at meal time. The chances are in a few weeks the complexion will be clear. For children reduce the amount to one-half or one-quarter of a cake with each meal.

The Broken Circle!

CHAPTER XXIII.

"How plainly I can see you there!" he said, looking at the reflection. "Every primrose can be seen distinctly in the water. Now tell me, are you not pleased with your costume?"

"If you are," she sighed. Her heart was beating fast with a passion of love and pain. He could be so near her, he could stand with her in that lovely spot, and yet nothing brought his heart nearer to hers! She did not know that at that moment he cared for her more than he had ever done; for Sir Basil, as he gazed at the face reflected in the water, had seen something there which had stirred his heart—a sad, wistful look, not at all suited to the beautiful face; and he knew quite well what had called it there. It was love for himself.

The next minute he had clasped her hands in his, and bending over her, whispered to her the words that made the music of her life.

She made no answer—to have saved her life she could not have uttered a word; but the light on her face was answer enough to him. The happy eyes fell; the beautiful head, with its primrose crown, rested on the edge of the marble basin. In her heart she was thanking Heaven for the blessing given to her.

"Do you love me, Leah?" he asked. Ah, Heaven, the love that shone in her eyes, that radiated from her face! A voice of sweetest music whispered,

"I have loved you from the first moment I saw your face. I pray Heaven that I may see it last in this world."

The words fell softly over the rippling waters, softly as the sigh of a summer breeze; and when they ended Sir Basil kissed her, speechless with emotion.

Three days afterwards Sir Basil and Leah stood looking again at the marble Undine. The sparkling waters were rising now in the sunlight, and as they fell into the great marble

"SIX MONTHS AGO"

"It's hard to realize that six months ago I couldn't walk across the floor and now I am so well!"

"I have never been very strong but the heat last summer was too much for me. This and the fact that my husband was out of work and I had to work day and night to keep from starving, left me a physical wreck. Luckily my husband was able to get a good job just when I had to go to bed. I tried everything I could think of to get strong, but each day I seemed to be getting weaker and weaker. I was reduced to a skeleton, I couldn't eat or sleep, I had no strength left and finally I was so weak that I was trying to cross the floor one day I collapsed. I was so ill and weak that I didn't care whether I lived or died. And then I heard about that marvelous preparation—Carroll. A friend of mine had used it with wonderful results and as it had done so much for her, I decided to try it. The results were nothing less than miraculous. In two weeks I was able to get up and walk about the house. My appetite had returned. I was actually hungry. I could sleep when I went to bed, something I had not been able to do for months. I have already taken six bottles of Carroll and I am still taking it. I weigh more today than I ever weighed before in my life. I sleep like a child. I am never tired and my skin is as clear and my cheeks as rosy as a girl's. I bless the day I heard about Carroll." Mrs. K., Toronto.

basin, they glistened like drops of gold.

"I shall always love the Undine," said Leah. "The duchess has promised to let me have it photographed, and I shall keep the little picture where I can always see it. Undine's lover gave to her a soul; you gave me—"

"What?" he asked, gently, seeing that she paused.

"You have given me life," she said. There was no misgiving in her mind, not the faintest doubt. She believed that he loved her as she loved him. They were the two halves of one soul; now they were united and shared but one life, one soul between them. Sure that he felt as she did, she made no secret of her love. She did not measure her words; she disclosed her whole heart to him.

She puzzled him greatly on one occasion. They had wandered through the woods down to the sea. The tide was rolling in; the sun shone on the water till it looked like burnished gold; afar off gleamed the white sails of many a graceful yacht. Beautiful as was this fair world, love made it fairer. They sat under the shelter of the cliffs; and Leah turned from the rippling waves to look at her lover's face.

"Basil," she said, "I have often wished to ask you—did you recognize me on the morning that you met me first?"

"On the morning when you stood like a beautiful statue, draped in white and gold, among the passion-flowers?" he said. "What a picture you presented, Leah!"

"Did you recognize me?" she repeated.

"In what way, my darling?" he asked.

"As I did you. I knew in one moment that the lover for whom I had waited had come at last. How strange that I always had that feeling! Some times, when the duchess talked to me, and seemed angry because I had dismissed one whom she considered an eligible suitor—sometimes my courage failed me. She thought my ideas vain and sentimental. Yet, you see, I was right. Tell me, Basil, did you recognize me? Did you say to yourself, 'This is the girl who has been made for me, the one woman out of the whole world who is to be my wife?' Did you, Basil?"

He was puzzled. If he had said "No," she would be unhappy, and he could not bear to cloud her beautiful face; yet he could not say "Yes" without swerving from the truth.

"Men have not those quick intuitions," he said. "That which a woman knows, discerns by instinct, in some time in piercing the denser brain and more stolid heart of a man."

She looked a little disappointed.

"When did you find it out then?" she asked, anxiously.

"Find what out, Leah?"

"Why, that you loved me, Basil."

In spite of himself a flush rose to his face, but she took that as a sign of loving emotion.

"Am I to tell you the exact hour and minute?" he said, laughing.

"If you can," she replied.

"I cannot, Leah. I suppose, as the novelists say, 'it stole upon me unawares.'"

"Basil," she whispered, "do tell me one thing. When you are away from me, you know, I like to sit and think over every word that you have said to me. I like to dwell on all the pleasant and happy thoughts I have about you. Tell me, Basil, did you admire me when you first saw me?"

"Indeed, I did," he replied, heartily. "I thought you then, as I think you now, the fairest woman in the world."

"Did you? I am so glad. I am well content that you should think me fair. I have never cared or thought about what people call my good looks; but now I am glad, since they please you."

He was very near loving her, she was so loving to him. Yet even on that morning, when she opened her mind to him as a flower opens its petals to the sun, even then he did not catch one spark of the divine fire that men call love. The time came when she counted the happy days of her life, and this was one of the brightest.

The news of their engagement had been made public at once. Sir Basil had gone direct to the general and told him. They had not said much to each other, but the general was greatly comforted. He believed that Sir Basil had grown to love his niece, therefore, all was well.

The duchess was not surprised; she had foreseen the result from the first, she said. She congratulated Sir Basil in such a fashion that he was prouder than ever of what he had won.

"I shall always think of you," she said, "as of a most remarkable man. You have won for yourself what no other could win."

Later on she said to Leah, "after kissing her:

"I am right well pleased, my dear. I suppose, Leah, it is 'this or none?'"

"Heaven has been very good to me, and has given me my heart's desire," replied the girl, as her eyes filled with tears.

There was to be no hurry about the wedding. Glen must be altered and improved, must be decorated and refurbished. During the spring of the coming year a general election was expected, and Sir Basil would be busy trying to secure a seat in Parliament. It was agreed on all sides that the marriage should not take place just yet. Nor did Leah wish it to be otherwise. She was supremely happy; her life was crowned, her love was blessed. The general and his niece remained a few weeks longer at Dene Abbey, and then returned to Brentwood.

Leah took with her the photograph of the marble Undine, but no one save Sir Basil understood why she prized it. She was perfectly content; there was no cloud in her sky, she had no misgiving, no fear. Just as the glowing sun absorbs all minor lights, so her passionate love eclipsed all else. She wished for nothing save that Hettie should know how happy she was. She would have liked to tell her fair-haired beloved sister of this love which made her one of the happiest women in the world.

The general and Leah went back to Brentwood, Sir Basil returned to Glen, and the months that followed were full of quiet happiness. Every day brought the master of Glen over to Brentwood. As the whole mansion was in the hands of workmen, he often remained at the general's long days together. The more Sir Arthur saw of him the more he liked him; he never wearied of sounding his praises to his niece—he loved him as he would have loved a son of his own. (To be continued.)
