POUNDING AT THE FORBIDDEN CITY.

Washington, Aug. 22.-The navy department has received the following cablegram from Admiral Remey: "Che Foo, Aug. 21.-Taku, Aug. 20.-Dickens' command is landing today. Pekin, 16.—All except imperial city cleared of Chinese troops. American troops first to enter imperial city, hav-ing penetrated to the gates of the palace. Capt. Chaffee's losses, 6 killed, 30 wounded, two days' fighting. Remey." The navy department understands from the reference to the palace that the American troops, after penetrating the imperial city were, when the dispatch was sent, attacking the forbidden city. This is the inner inclosure of the imperial city. Rome, Aug. 22.—Dispatches received here from Taku, under date of Aug. 20, say that according to advices from a Japanese source, dated Aug. 17, the battle of Pekin was then finished, the Japanese had entered the imperial pal-ace, and the foreign ministers, with detachments of the allied troops, occupied the Imperial city, the Chinese princes and ministers having retired to Seian (Sian Fu?), west of Pekin.

With a cry he let go his hold, and in a moment he was dashed to the ground beneath. It was thought that the man was killed, but in a few moments he seemed fairly well. The man was burned on the hands, and his back was strained, but otherwise he was unhurt.

Rev. Sam Jones.

Rev. Sam Jones, the evangelist, recently concluded his series of meetings at the National Park, Philadelphia. The Park Association paid him for the work. He says he makes $30,-000 a year and doesn't save a cent. Here are some of his quaint sayings, culled from sermons which he has delivered at the park: Infidelity breaks down because it has

I can understand Ingersoll because he got $1,000 a night; but I never could understand the poor little fool that ran after him for nothing and boarded himself. An infidel came to me once and said: "You've got something I haven't, and I want it." "All right," I said. "You just keep your mouth shut, and I guess I can pull you through. You've pretty near talked yourself into hell as it stands now."

So he said he would and I went at him, and every time he wanted to speak I told him to keep his mouth shut. And by keeping his mouth shut

Well, I only know of one thing that comes to the waiter, and that's gray hairs. When you wanted to get married did you wait for the woman to come and ask you? Maybe you wish you had. The Power of Advertising.

[Lindsay Post.]

In the course of some remarks on the great increase in the use of advertising columns by the banks of all countries, the American Banker indirectly bears testimony to the power of the newspaper advertisement. It points out that the old-fashioned idea that advertising a bank was, if not infra dignitatem, at least superfluous has now become a thing of the past, and that the banker now knows well Dubois landed here from France, a enough that this is an age of competition with banks as well as with other branches of commerce, and that he must, if he wants to maintain his position in the race, have recourse to the being weak, the change had a serious only means in existence of effectually keeping his name constantly and man who did him no good. He went prominently before the public. And to others with a similar result in each the Banker adds that the change has cas come slowly, and that it was not easy to overcome "a prejudice the product of conditions long passed away," and that city met a man who was suffering that "the old-fashioned idea that the the same thing as myself, but had solicitation of business was undignified, gave way only before the experi-ence that it paid." It proceeds: All engaged in mercantile enterprises soon caught the spirit of the advertising era; they knew they were in trade to make money, and, having learned by experience how advertis-ing enlarged their business, they freely used the medium for soliciting custom. Still, for a few years some of the old spirit lingered in the directors and managers of insurance companies and banks. They cherished the idea of their dignity being imperiled by advertising until some of these fossils began to see that their business was in peril from the inroads made on it by advertising competitors. When one insurance company decided to place its card in a daily paper one of the directors, a city magnate, was so shocked at the sight of his name in the advertisement that he resigned. So fastidious were men of the old school, that, years ago, on the bank offices in mighty's grand excursion train goin' that, years ago, on the bank offices in by every day, and God sayin' "All many towns and cities there was no aboard!"
