"It was a mere toss-up whether I or my "and John Delancy Curtis, took the floor against the combination of noble lords who have retained you to look effect their interests, or protect them, I ought to say; but fate favored him, so I am a mere bottle-holder. To push the simile a bit further, Mr. Schmidt, I may describe Mr. Steingall as the referee and watch holder. "Then he cries 'Time' someone will go to Sing Sing."

Perhaps some attribute of the father revealed itself in the son, because Steingall, who thought at first that Devar had allowed his tongue to run away with him, fancied that the lawyer dropped his inquiries somewhat suddenly.

"The Earl of Valletort and Count Vassilan are due now," he said, glancing at 2 clock.

"Oh, they will be here without fail," said the detective. "Mr. Claney, of the Bureau, is bringing de Courtois."

"Isse," he nodded. "If she refused to the normal step in the work of the parties of the fraud which had been practiced up her."

"I see," he nodded. "If she refused to

"Oh, they will be here without fail," said the detective. "Mr. Claney, of the Bureau, is bringing de Courtois."
"Bringing him?" repeated Schmidt.
"Yer"
"Yese," he nodded. "If she refused to remain with him, the marriage would be declared void. But if she elected to treated to the second sec "Yes."
"Unofficially?"

"Bringing him?" repeated Schmidt.

"Yes."

"Unofficially?"

"That depends wholly on de Courtois. He has to come, whether he likes it or not. Whether he will be allowed to go away again is another matter."

Schmidt's eyelids fell in thought. Probably he reflected that there are two sides to every argument, and he had heard but one. Certainly, John Delancy Curtis did not strike him as the dare-devil meddler, if not worse, he had been depicted by the fiery Earl.

"The Earl of Valletort and Count Ladislas Vassilan," announced a clerk, and Curtis took one square look at his rival. He needed no more to confirm Hermione's unfavorable opinion. The carnest effort of a doctor to paint out two black eyes had not been wholly successful.

His lordship looked mightly displeased when he discovered the presence of Curtis and Devar, but he was a self-confident man, and regarded himself as a personage of such importance that he assumed the lead in this company at once. Moreover, it was evident that he had resolved takep a firm rein on his temper.

"Now, Mr. Schmidt," he said brusquely. "your time and mine is valuable. Why have Count Vassilan and I been summoned her this morning by the police authorities?"

Schmidt looked at Steingall, and the Letetive seemed to be almost at a loss for words.

"No, sir. That man who stands there, and whose name is given as Curtis."

The Earl nearly grew wrathful. It annoyed him to find that Curtis was not looking at him at all, but was greatly interested in Schmidt. That was another trait of Curtis's. He had learnt long ago to select the ablest among his adversaries, and watch that man's face. Mere impassivity supplied no real cloak, for Curtis, in his time, had dealt with Chinese mandarins whose countenance betrayed no more expression than a carved ivory mask

Schmidt looked at Steingall, and the letective seemed to be almost at a loss for words.

"I am—not aware—there is any particular call—for hurry," he said. "Areyou, my lord, and Count Vassilan thinking of returning to Europe tomorrow?"
The Hungarian laughed, not mirthfully, but with the forced gayety of a man who had considered how to act, and meant to adopt a decided attitude.

"Certainly not," said the Earl stiffly, with uplifted eyebrows.

Steingall pursed his lips, and his forehead seemed in a reflective frown.

"I ought to explain," he said, "that I put the question as offering what appeared to me an easy way out of a situation which pristles with difficulties otherwise."

"Certainly not," said the Earl stiffly, with uplifted eyebrows.

Steingall pursed his lips, and his forehead seemed in a reflective frown.

"I ought to explain," he said, "that I put the question as offering what appeared to me an easy way out of a situation which bristles with difficulties otherwise." His hesitancy had suddenly been replaced by slowness of utterness, but it is reasonable to suppose that, of those present. Curtis and Schmidt alone noted the marked distinction.

"My good man," said the Earl, "you must have the strangest notion of the reason which accounts for my presence in New York, I came here to rescue my daughter from a set of designing ruffians, some of whom I knew of, and others whom I heard of. Why you should think that I may have it in mind to leave the country without being accompanied by Lady Hermione Grandison I cannot tell, and it is in the highest degree improbable that she will be prepared to sail tomorrow. Apart from my private arrangements, too, I mean to remain here until morrow. Apart from my private arrangements, too, I mean to remain here until morrow and Mr. Curtis was the direct was the direct of the stone of the stone of the sail to morrow. Apart from my private arrangements, too, I mean to remain here until the properties of missiving and instructions have brought actions and instructions have brought action.

"The detective spoke so impressively that Lord Valletort eyed him with a species of misgiving, while Count Vassilan, whose knowledge of English was excellent, had broken out into a species of misgiving.

A smooth metallic is interested only in his detect have punished at least one person as the deserves."

"Jean de Courtois?" inquired Steinall.

"No, sir. That man who stands there, and whose name is given as Curtis."
