MR. JERMYN'S RACQUET.

(CONCLUDED)

She took it up, tears of vexation glistening in her eyes. Ah, it was quite spoilt, of course she might have expected that The netting loo ened, the head twisted; the plaiting on the handle hanging in long strips. Hopeless y, irredeemably spoilt. She turned it over and over; heedless of the damp mould encasing her feet. The very wood had worn into a hole underneath where the plaiting had been. Alas for poor Mr. Jermyn's racquet!

Stay—this was not a hole. No, no. What was this? A little round bit of tin about the size of a half crown. She stared at it and pushed it down at one side, and found that it turned back as if upon a hinge. The next instant her face had grown whiter than the white house beside which she was standing. The locket that she had given him, the locket with her own minature, was lying before her eyes!

See took out the locket, from its bed, and stared before her blankly. In one moment she understood—she saw it all. The only thing was, how had she been so blind as no to see it from the first. The man in whose rooms she had discovered the locket and the racquet that fatal afternoon was well known among them as being a mechanical genius. He was always making things, and contriving things, and inventing things. Of course she knew that; how had she not thought of it? He was to have been Douglas Jermyn's best man; of course Douglas had entrusted him with the locket that he might do this with it. And very likely, most possibly, the racquet and locket had been thrust hastily aside where she had seen them, at the announcement of her entry. It was an old, fanciful idea of Mr. Jermyn's—of Douglas's. She could not help smiling at it in the midst of her distress—but then Douglas had always been so fanciful.

She pushed her way slowly and dazedly out of the bushes again, the locket still in her hand. She went in at the same door, along passed the wraps. They were still there, but to-night she never even noticed them, and at the foot of the stairs paused and drew a deep breath of positive horror. Oh, were things always to turn against her! What fate, or chance, had ordered that Mr. Jermyn should be coming down those stairs?

Whatever it had been, he was coming down then. In point of fact, he had gone up by this quiet way for a pipe he had left in the smoking room. He was in evening dress, but looked in no wise surprised to see the beautiful Miss Raymond, dishevelled and dripping, coming in at this hour from the garden. He drew aside politely to let her pass—just underneath the rose colored lamp. Whether it was the coldness of the action or that the soft rays reminded her of how she had stood here last night, she stopped abruptly, and bringing the racquet from underneath her cloak, handed it to him.

"Mr. Jermyn," she said, bitterly, "look at your racquet."

He took it from her without the faintest start, and examined the head of it with great composure.

"I would not have believed," said he, pleasantly, "that a strong racquet like mine could become so ridiculously twisted with a couple of showers of rain. But of course you know, Miss Raymond, there was the damp ground as well. Pardon me —I hope you changed your shoes before venturing into the shrubbery."

She started at him in a stupefied way for a couple of seconds, and then burst out angrily:

"If you knew, Mr. Jermyn, why did you not tell me?"

"Tell you," repeated Mr. Jermyn, amazedly; and then broke into a short laugh, which he instantly suppressed. "After you left the drawing room yesterday evening, by the merest chance in the world, I happened to look out of the open drawing room window. I did so just in time to see my own racquet precipitated from another window—from the tower window. Now, as you had mentioned to me not a quarter of an hour before, that your rooms were in that tower I—I—hardly thought it necessary to remind you of the incident about the racquet. Believe me, it should have lain undisturbed there, so far as I am concerned, until the end of the world, or until the gardener brought it once more to light. I am sorry if you have wet your feet."

She stared at him and leaned back against the banister.

"If you saw it falling, why did you not go out for it? Why did you leave it there in the rain?" she asked, piteously.

"Because," said Mr. Jermyn, politely, but making a movement as if he would pass, "I had far too great a respect for the wishes of Miss Raymond. Excuse me —they are waiting for me in the drawing room."

"Mr. Jermyn," she interrupted quickly, and standing before him, "you—you must let me tell you. You must let me explain —as well as I can explain—ah!" the broke off, covering her eyes suddenly, "I wonder what you do think of me?"

He stared down at her. The deep silence always dominant in this part of the house was unbroken, save for the faint ticking of a clock. After an instant's pause he answered her in a totally different voice:

"Upon my word, I don't know. Surely it was a—well—shall I say a foolish thing to do? Upon my word, I don't know what I think of you—Aurora.

At the sound of her own name she started, and then tightened her hold on the banister.

"I would have told you yesterday," she began feverishly, "but I seemed not to be able to find words—and you would not give me time. I took the racquet, Mr. Jermyn, simply because an irresistible desire, came over me to hold it, and to look at it. Then, when I heard my aunt's voice, I pushed it hastily behind the curtains, and when I came up an hour afterward and found it gone, and knew not how it had gone or who had taken it, I cannot tell you what I felt. This is the real truth. It is only a few minutes ago that, seeing my window open, it suddenly occurred to me about the garden"

He stared at her, and stared at the racquet in her hand; then all at once stared and looked up at her again.

"You have found it out?" he said, quickly. "You know then—at last."

"Yes, I have found it out," she answered, opening her hand and showing the locket. "I understand all—I am so sorry! —I have regretted it bitterly?"

"I have been sorry ever since," said Mr. Jermyn, abruptly and huskily. "It was all, every bit of it, my own fault."

"No, no," she interrupted, with vehemence. "It was all mine."

She made a rapid movement to get up the staircase, but he barred the way this time.

"Aurora," he said, "listen; it was both our faults; or it was nobody's fault—not even the racquet's. It was all a mistake. Oh, Aurora! Let us begin it all over again."

"Cuckoo—cuckoo?"—ten lusty times. It seemed almost as if there was a ring of amusement in the little bird's voice; but neither Miss Raymond nor Mr. Jermyn noticed it.

Five minutes later Miss Raymond went up the staircase uninterruptedly, but looking strangely beautiful even for her; and Mr. Jermyn passed into the drawing room with a radiant face; and the racquet in his hand—to tell such story as seemed good to him.

Loss of Flesh and Strength, with poor appetite, and perhaps slight cough in morning, or on first lying down at night, should be looked to in time. Persons afflicted with consumption are proverbially unconscious of their real state. Most cases commence with disordered liver, leading to bad digestion and imperfect assimilation of food—hence the emaciation, or wasting of the flesh. It is a form of scrofulous disease, and is curable by the use of that greatest of all blood cleansing, anti-bilious and invigorating compounds, known as Dr. Pierce's "Golden Medical Discovery."

Hugo's Resting Place.

PARIS, May 27.—The official journal publishes a decree restoring the pantheon to its original use, a receptacle for the remains of great men, and ordering that the body of Victor Hugo to be buried there. The funeral has been fixed for Monday night.

—Most excruciating are the twinges which rack the muscles and joints of the rheumatic. Northrop & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery and Dyspeptic Cure, by promoting increased action of the kidneys, by which the blood is more effectually depurated, removes through the natural channels certain acrid elements in the circulation which produces rheumatism and gout. The medicine is also a fine laxative antibilious medicine and general corrective.

Young Men!—Read This.

—THE VOLTAIC BELT Co., of Marshall Mich., offer to send their celebrated ELECTRO VOLTAIC BELT and other ELECTRIC APPLIANCES on trial for thirty days, to men (young or old) afflicted with nervous debility, loss of vitality and manhood, and all kindred troubles. Also for rheumatism, neuralagia, paralysis and many other diseases. Complete restoration to health, vigor, and manhood guaranteed. No risk is incurred as thirty days' trial is allowed. Write them at once for illustrated pamphlet free. 135

—Mrs. A. Nelson, Brantford, writes: "I was a sufferer from Chronic Dyspepsia for eleven years. Always after eating, an intense burning sensation in the stomach, at times very distressing, caused a dropping and languid feeling, which would last for several hours after eating. I was recommended by Mr. Popplewell, chemist, of our city, to try Northrop & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery and Dyspeptic Cure, and I am thankful to say that I have not been better for years; that burning sensation and languid feeling has all gone, and food does not lie heavy on my stomach. Others of my family have used it with the best results."

Catarrh—A New Treatment.

Perhaps the most extraordinary success that has been achieved in modern science has been attained by the Dixon treatment for catarrh. Out of 2000 patients treated during the past six months, fully ninety per cent. have been cured of this stubborn malady. This is none the less startling when it is remembered that not five per cent. of the patients presenting themselves to the regular practitioner are benefitted, while the patent medicines and other advertised cures never record a cure at all. Starting with the claim now generally believed by the most scientific men that the disease is due to the presence of living parasites in the tissues. Mr. Dixon at once adapted his cure to their extermination; this accomplished, the catarrh is practically cured, and the permanency is unquestioned, as cures effected by him four years ago are cures still. No one else has ever attempted to cure catarrh in this manner, and no other treatment has ever cured catarrh. The application of the remedy is simple and can be done at home, and the present season of the year is the most favorable for a speedy and permanent cure, the majority of cases being cured at one treatment. Sufferers should correspond with Messrs. A. H Dixon & Son, 305 King street west, Toronto, Canada, and enclose stamp for their treatise on catarrh.—Montreal Star. 46

—S. Chadwick of Arcadia, Wayne Co., writes: "I have had severe attacks of asthma for several years. I commenced taking Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil. The first dose relieved me in one hour. I continued taking it in teaspoonful doses for a few days, and have not had an attack of it since, now nearly one year."

—Every year increases the popularity of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. Recommended for all pulmonary troubles.

—There is nothing equal to Mother Graves' Worm Exterminator for destroying worms. No article of its kind has given such satisfaction.

—West Toronto Junction is within a few minutes walk of the Union station by the trains of either the Ontario and Quebec and the Grand Trunk or the Northern. Real estate in the neighborhood has steadily risen in value and promises to advance still more rapidly. Some of the best lots in West Toronto are to be had from Geo. Clarke, 295 Yonge street.

—A field of corns.—Thomas Sabin of Eglington, says: "I have used Holloway's Corn Cure with the best results, having removed ten corns from my feet. It is not a half way cure or reliever, but a complete extinguisher, leaving the skin smooth and clear from the least appearance of the corns."

—No other preparation meets the wants of the debilitated system as Dr. Ayer's Sarsaparilla.

—C. R Hall, Grayville, Ill., says: "I have sold at retail 156 bottles of Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil, guaranteeing every bottle. I must say I never sold a medicine in my life that gave such universal satisfaction. In my own case, with a badly ulcerated throat, with a physician penciling it for several days to no effect, the Eclectric Oil cured it thoroughly in twenty-four hours, and in threatened croup in my children this winter it never failed to relieve almost immediately.
