

ed upon me. At the end of that time I was accepted as an officer, and appointed lieutenant to Captain Freeman in the home, where we worked together for God. Nothing was too hard if only poor lost souls might be won for the Master; and truly He gave us good success, not only in the home, but during the midnight hours, in the vilest haunts of sin and shame have we stood and preached Christ and His power to save all who would come unto Him. Nearly three years after my conversion Miss Freeman left the home, and was about to return to England, having come to the colonies for her health, when one evening, after a very fatiguing day in the slums, seeking for a broken-hearted mother's daughter who had gone astray, I returned home and found an English letter awaiting me. It was from my youngest brother, telling of the illness of my father, at the same time saying, "If you want to see him alive you had better come home at once." At the conclusion
