for approval ? They do not go out from the University with the same stamp on them, as it were, as do the students who obtain degrees and it scarcely seems ^{necessary} to put them on the same basis as the others even in this respect. However, that is a small matter. In the next place, there should be some organization to arrange proceedings at their little ceremony, presumably in conjunction with myself. Probably it would be advisable for Corporation to make provision for a committee consisting of the heads of the different schools to decide upon a programme in this connection, unless of course your Committee of Deans wishes to make all the decisions, although I should think they would prefer to leave it to Corporation.

You will recall that there is a motion before Corporation to grant representation to these different schools. If it were decided that it is not necessary for them to report the names of winners of diplomas it would do away with one of the main arguments which has been advanced in favour of this representation.

Yours very truly,
