

giving the Captain the bearings of these men, the course you have set on travelling to your ship.

Question 13—Coming on deck in the night to take charge of the watch, what is the first thing you would do?

Answer 13—I would enquire from the retiring officer what orders he had, what course to steer, and would see if the Regulation Lights were burning brightly, and if not, would have them attended to immediately.

Question 14—What other precautions would you take?

Answer 14—I would see that the lookout men were at their posts. If the ship was stopped and work was carrying on, I would see that all my watch were at work. If not, I would enquire into the reason and report the same to my superior officer.
