

The next speaker was Father Chotkowski, professor, University of Cracow, and a great enemy of the Ukrainian clergy. He said:

"I have been for 21 years a close student of Ukrainian history and I have come to the conclusion that the Ukrainians have no right to complain against the Poles. The Ukrainians hate the Poles and constantly strive to do them harm. They are a nation of fools, sluggards and questionable characters. With such honorable warfare is impossible so they must be destroyed in every possible way."

The following day, May 16, 1908, the participants in the meeting of the Prawica Narodowa convened in stately manner and continued the discussion of the Ukrainian question. It was concluded the Ukrainian people owe everything they have to the Poles: their churches, schools, and education. But they are ungrateful and now both Ukrainians and even Moskophils wage war against the Poles. The Ukrainian must be crushed unmercifully while the Moskophils must be enticed by various promises in order to win
