he was a contractor in wild parts of the west, and drove his own horses in trotting races. The late John W. Rogers, who was trainer for H. P. Whitney for several years, handled Corrigan's horses.

Many stories have been told about Corrigan's rough treatment of men with whom he disagreed, but those who were very intimate with him, among them Captain J. H. Rees of Memphis, all declare that at heart he was loyal to his friends, but was a determined enemy to those he had reason to distrust.

Corrigan's assets are given at $13,650: Habilities, $173,998.

If the rating of the winning owners' list were to go by the number of races won Harry Payne Whitney would come out on top, for in all he won 30 races, and this is more than has been credited to any of the British owners. The total for these 30 races amounted to $47.-620, which puts him sixth on the list. Fifteen races were captured by the State of the won over £2000.
