During the three sessions vesterday various reports were received and adopted. The recommendation of the foreign mission committee that the Presbyteries' committee brang the laymen's movement into touch with every congregation within their bounds and that they advocate the formation of missionary associations in every congregation, and a missionary campaign undertaked, were adopted, as well as suggestions for improve ed, as well as suggestions for improv-

Loggie of Sudbury, "and distribute the Bible among them and disturb them in their relation to their church and then to leave them alone, is not honorable. leave them alone, is not honorable. The bodies of the two boys were found beneath the bed. The wife, however, apparently had never moved. There was no sign of struggle; but the clothes on the bed were pulled up around her and her hands were folded on her breast.

The prisoner had been making remarks about town that he feared he might be poisoned, yet had bought marks about town that he feared he might be poisoned, yet had bought strychnine the day before the fire, and strychnine had been found in the woman's stomach. McLachlan, it would be shown, had been talking, too, to friends that his wife might commit suicide, as she was a melancholy woman.

The Jury.

The jury is composed of: Chas. Brown, Wm. Hepburn, Ed. Acton, J. E. H. Davis, M. Vipond, Geo. Burnett, E. Webber, D. McLean, Chas. Adams, Walter Annis, Chas. Schofield, and W. J. Stevenson. One man was rejected by the crown when he professed himself a Quaker.

Evidence given in the afternoon was mostly a repetition of that heard at the inquest and preliminary trial. Thos. Palmer, a bartender, said McLachlan had three or four drinks of beer and left the hotel about 9 p.m. the night of the fire. On the next Sunday prisoner had said, "I wonder where I'll be next Sunday, in my grave or behind the bars." McLachlan had wished his wife and children were alive.

wished his wife and children were alive.

Bert Lott told of McLachlan's acquaintance with Alma Nix. Once prisoner had laughingly wondered what people would say if he went away with her. To Mr. Henderson, Lott said that when he had suggested to McLachlan taking her for a drive, prisoner had said he didn't want any person to come between him and his wife.

Dr. Shier, tho, told of having carefully tied the openings of the stomach before it dropped into the box, and these bindings were not dis-turbed when he found it the following day, when it was shipped to To-rento for expert analysis. Even if he had known, as he did now, of the presence of strychnine in the stomach, Dr. Shier declared his opinion would still be unaltered that suffo-cation caused death.

"And I would not even alter my report unless I get undisputable evi-dence of strychnine in the stomach."

Dr. Shier seems to be one of the first to have questioned McLechlan's conduct during the fire. "The thought came to me," he said, "while at the undertaker's that night, how it was he undertaker's that night, how it was he did not know his wife was in that room, so I went to see him in the Bascom House about 3 a.m. I knew he drank, and thought he might be intoxicated, but he was not. Nor did he appear particularly grieved. He talked glibly. I spoke about rumors that he had been unduly fond of a young single lady, and he said there was nothing between them."

Dr. Shier said the burns he had found on Mrs. McLachlan's skin had been inflicted after death. In cross-

Why the Morning Newspaper The Woman's Side of It

Being Chapter II. of the Calling of the Ancient and Honorable Bluff of the Even-ing Newspaper Posing in Borrowed Cloth-ing as the Only Home Paper.

IGURE it out for yourself. Take the woman of the house for instance. All day long she has been attending to the multitudinous cares of the house and the children, and the thousand and one matronly duties.

When night comes does she figure on sitting down and plowing through a newspaper?

Not if she is the sort whom Mr. Advertiser is after---the live woman---not if she is the one whose trade is worth getting. Not if she cares for her husband and her home.

No Sir ! She's been looking all day for John to come home-and after tea---she's planned to go to the theatre---or to see friends—or to go to a party—or do anything else but wade through a stuffy newspaper. The time she takes to read the papers is at breakfast—or just after hubby has gone—or she will read it at odd times in the morning.

If the day is her regular shopping day, that merchant is losing opportunities who does not have his attractions properly displayed in the morning paper, for she's eating her breakfast with her hat on ready to run down with hubby and she's looking for the announcements of the things she should have.

If it isn't her regular shopping day, and she sees something that's positively what she's looking for on sale to-day---John will be ordered to stop in on his way down.

The time to advertise is when you want to sell.

The advertisement that says "to-day" is more potent than the one that says "to-morrow."

And the morning paper is the only one that says "to-day," and it is delivered and ready long before the day's business is begun.

The woman's "to-day" for shopping is in the morning.

The advertiser who remembers this and places his telling "ads" in the morning paper is logically bound to win, for he has caught the weman's "to-day" at the psychological moment.

This is not a theory but a maxim and is proven by every other city in the country.

Try it out and watch results.
