LADIES' NAMES.
There is a strange delirium
Combined with countless graces,
As often in the Indies' faces,
Some ope and some are hid,
Some only sweet and musical,
Some horridly unkind,
Some fit for ladies of the first grade,
Some only fit for scullery-maids.

THE JUDGMENTS WHICH AWAIT THE FRENCH ARMY.
From the Constitution of the Army and Navy Register and Waterloo Gazette.
Sir—The conduct of the French Army in bantering and taking possession of Rome, and thus siding and supporting the Pope, and assisting him in his Holy War, and which he has threatened shall by and by be annihilated; and the city itself, which they have solemnly sworn to defend, shall break forth with all the horrors of volcanic eruption, like unto Vesuvius and Etna. This one act would have been sufficient to have satisfied a student of prophecy that their destruction was near; a fact he that heathen shall fall, and that they are heathen shall fall, and they shall all fall together. Isaiah xxxii. 3. I look upon the calamities which have recently befallen the French nation as a judgment upon them for their interference in re-establishing the Pope, and nothing can possibly save them from final destruction, unless they immediately, and for ever, withdraw all support from him, who has been a cause to every nation and people who have been under his influence. The Army, which was ready to be sent forth against the Pope, and to carry out his views, which President had accordingly applied to the Admiralty, but that department said it was not in their power to all the necessary supplies to be sent to the Pope, and that a resolution was passed that the President should apply to the Admiralty and other branches of the Government, for pecuniary assistance to enable the President to carry out his views, and that the Admiralty, and the other branches of the Government, were required, at the same time they gave Lieutenant Pina unlimited leave to act on his own responsibility, and to do what he could. For his own part, he thought it would be better for the Pope, and which Lieutenant Pina had in view that he should not be hampered with any particular orders of the Admiralty, and that his success would chiefly depend on the information and assistance he might obtain at St. Petersburg. (Hear, hear.) Sir R. Murchison then applied to Lord J. Russell, stating the object for which Lieutenant Pina was going, and to that effect he received a very kind answer from Lord John Russell, as follows:—
