Under-Currents

By The Duchess

"I don't think I said that," he is beginning in a craven tone, when she interrupts him, emboldened no doubt, by that luckless qu'ere. "You did; you know you did. Oh Tom, to think you could be so unkind! Oh, that is all over. I may love you indeed such will be my unhappy fate—but to believe in you, to—respect you, is more than I—Here she gets the upper hand. "My dearest girl, how can you talk to me like that? See now, Griselda, it's impossible you can mean it, and— "But I do. Respect a man who finds fault with me? I'd like to see the girl who could do that. And when I remember all I endured this morning; the lies I told Grunch, the cruel way in which I flattened my nose against the window-panes trying to catch a glimpse of you, that faint signal to you why it was I wasn't coming! Oh, when I recollect it all, I feel that I ought to hate you. "The boys have gone down before her righteous indignation. "It doesn't matter what you ought to do, so long as you don't do it," and softly, with lamentable want of principle. "One should do one's duty," says she sternly. "Oh, don't do yours in this case," entreats he humbly. "You're laughing!" says the younger Miss Dysart, casting a severe glance at him. This glance is her undoing; it rouses her, and it is with the utmost difficulty that she succeeds in concealing the little smirk that has crept about the corners of her own mouth.

"Laughing? Far be it from me," says Mr. Peyton, who now, indeed is as grave as an owl. "Well," in a tone of resignation, "as you won't speak to me, I may as well occupy myself in other ways. Any objection to my smoking Miss Dysart?" As he speaks he draws from the pocket of his scandalous old coat the cigar case, a dainty affair, with a silver monogram. After this, he draws from another dinky pocket a match-box. Having lit the cigar, he still continues to regard the match box with a pensive eye. The name of the maker has a traced him, and a desire to make conversation and break the present constraint, at any price, urges him to proclaim it aloud. "Medici!" says he, with lazy astonishment. "Bless my stars, what a name!"

If he had thought, by taking this neutral subject into discussion, to lull his beloved into oblivion of her wrongs, he is mightily mistaken. "One would think you never heard it before," says she, in a distinctly unfriendly tone, and without a spark of that bonhomie that, as is popularly agreed, characterises her.

"Well, after all, perhaps I have," says Mr. Peyton ungeniously. "Something to do with the dark ages—the slaughter-house business, eh? I really do believe a faint inkling of it is coming to me. There was an unpleasant old woman, wasn't there, and a considerable quantity of blood and poisons galore, and trap-doors, and—it was rather Drury-Lanish, don't you think?"

"I was never at Drury Lane," cries she, with a uncompromising "No? Really?" with a charmingly surprised air. "What a loss you have sustained! Well, but to go back to the box," trapping it lightly. "Medici for a vendor of mince! How are the mighty fallen! It's a name rather out of place, you must allow," defending his position valorously.

"A very appropriate name, I think," says Griselda, declining to fall into his line of view. "Considering all we have ever heard of that most unpleasing Catherine, I should say she must now be in a position to send up tons of phosphor, or sulphur, or whatever those metaphors are made of, to her sorrowing relatives."

"Oh, I say," says Mr. Peyton, and thereon most unwicely gives way to mirth. "If you don't take care," cries Griselda, overcome by this last token of frivolity on his part, in the midst of a tragical performance, "you will shortly be able to send tons of sulphur to your relatives; and with awful emphasis they won't be sorrowing."

As if horrified by this thought, she bursts into tears; and Mr. Peyton, horrified too, but from different causes, promptly takes her in his arms, and otherwise consoles her. "Griselda says he," "I will acknowledge myself to be the most inhuman, the most blood-stained wretch of my species, if only you will forgive me and be to me what you were before."

This appeal has apparently its charm Griselda, as if mesmerised by it at once succumbs, and with a sigh, suggestive of relief that quarrelling has come to an end, lays her head upon the blood-stained wretch, as though here indeed was a refuge from every storm.

Paces thus restored, they wander down the shady pathway, once more lost in the happy dreams of youth; still happier in the thought that, this being a blessed Sunday evening, no fear of Mr. Dysart's putting in an embarrassing appearance need be dreaded, that dear old man making a point of spending every seventh noon in his private chamber, the room in which Vera had once discovered him.

The lovers, therefore, secure in the thought of his absence, stroll leisurely along, whispering gay nothings and making wonderful merry. Their mirth has indeed reached quite a boisterous pitch, their laughs ring loud upon the air, as they come to a curve in their favorite walk in which stand a mouldering rustic seat, indecency has long since been lost sight of amongst the wreaths of respectable ivy that have insisted in re-lining her to a proper frame of mind.

SLEEPLESS NIGHTS OVERCOME BY SAFE METHODS

Suggestions given Whereby Insomnia Can be Safely and Quickly Cured

Worry, overwork, overstudy and indigestion cause insomnia. Healthy, natural sleep can't be produced by drugs.

First, the blood circulation must be improved.

Congestion of blood in the head must be removed.

Irritation in the brain must be relieved.

It's because Ferrozone equalizes circulation, because it soothes the irritation, because it removes congestion that it does cure insomnia.

For building blood and nerve, for instilling force and life into over-worked organs, for establishing strength and vitality, where can you find anything so efficient as Ferrozone?

Remember, sleep is just as important as food.

You must sleep or break down, but if you'll use Ferrozone and thereby remove the conditions which now keep you from sleep, you'll get well quickly.

Ferrozone is not a narcotic, not a dope; it is a health-giving tonic that any child or delicate woman can use.

Absolutely safe is Ferrozone.

Take it for a month, take it for a year—no harm, but immeasurable good will result.

To sleep well, look well, feel well, to be free from depression, nervousness or the blues—use Ferrozone. It's a food tonic, a healer to the weak and wretched a boon to the sleepless—sold in 50c boxes six for $2.50 at all dealers or direct from The Cataract-ozone Co., Kingston, Ont.

With Fingers! Corns Lift Off

Doesn't hurt a bit to lift any corn or callus right off. Try it!

For a few cents you can get a small bottle of the magic drug freezone recently discovered by a Cincinnati man.

Just ask at any drug store for a small bottle of freezone. Apply a few drops upon, a tender, aching corn or callus and instantly all soreness disappears and shortly you will find the corn or callus so loose that you lift it off with the fingers.

Just think! Not one bit of pain before applying freezone or afterwards. It doesn't even irritate the surrounding skin.

Hard corns, soft corns or corns between the toes, also hardened calluses on bottom of feet, shrivel up and fall off without hurting a particle. It is almost magical.

Ladies! Keep a tiny bottle on the dresser and never let a corn or callus ache twice.
