Our Anniversary Number

Our issue of June 26 will be known as our Anniversary Number, celebrating the tenth year since The Guide was started. Those who have followed The Guide during that period know the struggle through which it has come. It is doubtful if there has ever been a farm paper which has triumphed over so many unnatural difficulties as has The Guide.

One of the chief reasons that has enabled it to win out has been the loyalty of its readers. Not the least of the evidences along this line has been the way in which its readers have utilized The Guide's classified advertising columns—The Farmers' Market Place—as a medium of buying and selling. In many quarters it is believed that the success of a paper may be judged from the volume of classified advertising which it carries, as this is the advertising department in which the reader most usually spends his money.

It will be interesting for The Guide readers to know that during the twelve months ending April 30, The Guide has maintained its proud position as being the first farm paper in Western Canada in the volume of classified advertising carried.
During that period it carried over 17,500 count lines of this class of business, while the second paper carried approximately 9,500 and the third paper approximately 5,000 count lines. If we were to base these comparisons on the amount of money that The Guide readers have spent with their own paper as against what has been spent in the other two papers referred to, we would find that The Guide readers have spent in excess of 33 per cent. more than has been spent in the other two papers combined.

We take this opportunity of extending to our readers thanks for the loyal support they have given us. We believe that the service The Guide is giving is the best available in this field and we trust that we may have the continued patronage of our friends in the future in like measure as we have in the past.
We strongly recommend for your consideration the use of this June 26 issue for advertising purposes. We believe it will be outstandingly the most striking issue that The Guide has ever published. Send in your orders at once for the June 26 issue—our Ten-Year Anniversary Number.
