

Mr. Nesbitt died a few years later, somewhat disappointed at the Church's lack of interest and support, but the influence of a Christian man lived on. Chief Mistawasis sent a request for a missionary for his tribe, situated to the south of the first mission, and there was opened up the second mission with Hugh McKay at the head.

A Modern Indian Brave and his Mother

The first missionary sent by the Women's Foreign Missionary Society was Miss Baker, who labored for over 20 years near Prince Albert. The Indians loved her as a mother and many, young and old,