INTECH (1984) associates

1025 Hargrieve Rd., Unit 3,
London, Ontario N6E 1P7

Phone: (519) 686-1970
After Hours: 657-0390

THIS ORIGINAL DOCUMENT IS IN VERY POOR CONDITION

the residence opposite the Montreal Bank Quebec Street. [une2 3w

MONEY TO LEND.

Several thousand dollars to lend on good farm security at moderate rate of interest. Apply to A. DUNBAR, Barrister, &c., office over Petrie's Drug Store, Wyndham-st Guelph 1st April, wtf

E. W. McGUIRE, M. D.

PHYSICIAN, Surgeon & Accoucheur, Office and residence, Arthur-st., fronting opposite Knox's Church, Norfolk-st. Second attendance may be obtained at Dr. Wardell's Consultation Office, Norfolk-st. [dec 1 1y

DR. KEATING,

CORONER,

Member of the Royal College of Surgeons, England. [

FARMERS' [illegible]S HOTEL.

M. [illegible] begs to inform his friends and the travelling public generally that he has leased the above well known and old established hotel, and has had it thoroughly renovated and refitted throughout, and is now prepared to accommodate all who may favor him with a call. [illegible]

GEORGE [illegible]RS.

LIVERY STABLE.

[illegible]

What the People Say!

IS that they have been found uplifting to mind. It KILLS AT ONCE for the [illegible] of BANKING THROAT [illegible] Sold by DANIEL [illegible] Guelph. Ask for the [illegible] Dandelion, and get only [illegible] genuine. [illegible] by the proprietor, [illegible]

UNION HOTEL, ELMIRA.

[illegible] the public generally that he has leased the above well known and old established hotel, and has had it thoroughly renovated and refitted throughout, and is now prepared to afford [illegible] comfort and [illegible] Good Stabling and a [illegible] Hostler. Charges moderate. [illegible] solicited. [illegible] GEORGE VOIT, Proprietor.

JOSEPH MEWHORT,

PRODUCE DEALER

And Commission Merchant, 151 Wellington-st [illegible] Notice to Country Dealers that [illegible] ready to receive and forward [illegible] Produce entrusted to him per [illegible] Toronto, April 13th, 1870.

WELLINGTON HOTEL.

Moved, for the [illegible]

[illegible] beg to announce to the [illegible] that in consequence of the [illegible] in his business for the last 15 years, [illegible] has been necessarily obliged to [illegible] accommodations. This [illegible] has removed to the Wellington Hotel, where he intends to [illegible] the old landlord's long [illegible] liberal [illegible] of sale, and hopes he will deserve not only the [illegible] of his old customers and friends, but [illegible]

[illegible] expect a letter from me,' he [illegible] to answer. In the meantime, I [illegible] say that I think Combe made a good [illegible] coming to me. I know I shall not [illegible] in him; and I think I can [illegible] he will not be disappointed in [illegible]

[illegible] the letter arrived; and caused [illegible] excitement at the Merchant Leather-[illegible] School.

[illegible]Miles,' said the writer, 'was my [illegible] and I think I may say my friend [illegible] right that in selling him my [illegible] depriving his grandson of a [illegible] long wished that I had [illegible] whom I could train up to [illegible] worthy of my own [illegible] I am able in time to repay my [illegible] happy to be able to ask Frank [illegible] partner the honor on those terms. [illegible] and, I would wish him to live [illegible] and with his students, education, [illegible] he will soon master enough of [illegible] him honor to be able to take [illegible] partnership. That is only a [illegible] answer, so I say nothing [illegible] to salary at present; but I [illegible] end of each quarter to [illegible]

New FANCY STORE

Near the [illegible] Market,

MRS. [illegible] BUDD

[illegible] Berlin, Fancy Dry Goods, [illegible] Wools, [illegible]

made for his younger grandson.

"It was so. But he had made a will leaving me forty thousand pounds, and leaving all his fee simple estate to my cousin, now Sir Reginald; and it appears that the rule of equity is to consider money applicable to the purchase of land contracted to be purchased as if it were land; and so my cousin obtained everything by my grandfather's sudden death.'

"I am very sorry, indeed, to hear this. Is there anything I can do in the matter? I am personally aware that the estate was intended for Lieutenant Barton's son—that is, for you; and it is very hard that you should be deprived of estate and money both.'

"I trust you will pardon my boldness, sir but my purpose in coming to you was to ask whether you have a vacant stool in your, counting house, or if not whether you would kindly use your influence for me in some other office. I have not been at Blytheholme for many years, even for a single holiday. I have not seen my aunt, Lady Anna, or my cousin Sir Reginald. I have been during the whole time residing with Dr Dunstable at the Merchant Leather-dressers' School, and I confidently refer to him as to my character and conduct. The only prospect held out to me by my aunt I could not with self respect accept; and it is time to make a start in life. I have consulted no one as to this step; but I felt from what I had heard of you, sir, that if you knew the circumstances you would not hastily refuse my request.'

"And I shall not; but I shall not hastily accept you as in. Any relative of Sir Miles Hallet would have some claim on me, for he was very kind to me at a time of affliction and have a peculiar claim, and I shall not fail to recognize it in the best way I can devise. I must think the matter over, and I must see Dr Dunstable. To-morrow I shall do myself the pleasure of calling upon him. Meanwhile, make your mind quite easy; I shall think it a duty to put you in the right track.'

So Frank, bade him good morning, and hastened back to Westminster. Why was it that he had not asked for little Lucy? Certainly it was not because he had forgotten her, for more than once Mr Ashdell's face reminded him of the gentle girl. But he was afraid of betraying to her father, by speaking the name of her name, a secret which he dared scarcely confide to his own heart.

Next morning at a very early hour, Mr Ashdell's carriage rolled into the quadrangle of the Merchant Leather-dressers' School, and Mr Ashdell himself asked to see Dr Dunstable.

'I am a man of business, you know, Doctor, and, as time just now is very precious, I thought I would call on you before going to my office. Have I disturbed you from breakfast? I'm very sorry, indeed.'

'Not at all,' said the doctor, wondering much what brought the great West India merchant to the school.

'You have a boy in the school, I think, named Frank Barton. Tell me candidly what you know of him.'

If the good old Doctor had not just been informed that the time of his visitor was very precious, he would hardly have known how to stop once he got fairly started on the theme. As it was, he described briefly, but warmly, Frank's high spirit, his courteous disposition, his love of truth, his diligence, and his talents.

'You seem to [illegible] to fancy,' he said, 'that [illegible] a prodigy, or a great genius, or [illegible] of that kind; but he is clever, [illegible] and industrious, and what we all [illegible] in him is his gentleness and courage. I understand that he has been many years without seeing any of his relatives.'

'Yes; it is a sad story, and I confess I do not quite understand it; but he is quite determined to seek his own fortune irrespective of family connections; and, for my part, I am equally resolved to help him.'

Mr Ashdell somewhat astonished Dr Dunstable by describing Frank's interview with him on the previous day; and presently [illegible] himself sent for, and chided by his old master for not being taken into his confidence.

'I did not wish to say anything about it,' he explained, 'until I made sure that it would come to something. But I referred Mr Ashdell to you; for I knew you would not give a very bad account of me.'

Presently Mr Ashdell, again apologising [illegible] Dunstable at so early an [illegible]

[illegible] is in a sad state